BIG SALE OF 'WINE BRICKS' IN BOSTON

Today

50 Lb. Russian Cabbages
Encouragement for Ladies
Labor Union Samurai
Ships for Sale

By Arthur Brisbane

RUSSIA provides interesting news daily.

The truthful Walter Duranty cabled Adolph S. Ochs that Russia, using "extra rich fertilizers," raises giant vegetables, 50 pound cabbages, tomatoes weighing two to three pounds each, egg plants one yard and a half long, with plants 20 feet high, tobacco 6 feet high, with 150 leaves to each stem, 7 tons of dried leaf to the acre.

Some of the vegetables are grown on "framework high above the weeds." The intensive fertilizing costs $350 an acre, but lasts five years, about $70 per acre. And the South will want to know that the Russian Burbank named Zolotof has produced an average of five tons of cotton to an acre, and our wheat and cotton yesterday dropped to new low prices.

The Muscle Shoals commission, on September 1, will receive bids for "lease and operation in the interests of fertilizer production and of agriculture."

Selling to farmers at a reasonable price, such concentrated fertilizers as they use in Russia, instead of compelling farmers to pay freight on several hundred pounds of worthless stuff in order to get one hundred pounds of fertilizer mixed with it, might be Bolshevism, but it is the kind that would suit the farmer.

Chapin Collins, editor of the Montesano Vidette, of Montesano, Washington, sends this to encourage ladies.

Years ago William Moore married a lady 16 years older than he. People said "too bad, he will have to take care of her when she is old."

Mr. Moore is now 84, his wife, who celebrated her 100th birthday on July 26, is taking care of him, an invalid.

She does all her housework, all the work in her vegetable and flower garden, and finds life more interesting than ever.

Her father was a French-Canadian trader with the Hudson Bay Co., her mother a Spokane Indian.

When she was born Britain and the United States were disputing the great Oregon country. California and the southwest belonged to Mexico.

The lady has eight children, 10 grandchildren, five great-grandchildren, three great-great-grandchildren by the first two of her four husbands.

Transatlantic ship lines issue new rates. First-class to Europe $155 in winter, "third-class" $73.

"Third-class" might be left out of rates on American ships.

Kermit Roosevelt, son of the President, and his associate, Vincent Astor, and others, set a good example by running good ships to Europe all one class, fare $100.

Whether they make him President or not, the people will remember with admiration the news concerning Governor Roosevelt of New York, a former victim of infantile paralysis, now fortunately recovered. Governor Roosevelt has given to New York's department of health a pint of his blood to be used in combating an outbreak of the dreadful infantile paralysis in New York City.

A serum made from the blood of those that have recovered from the disease is found to be the best remedy.

The government having proved that running ships is one of several things that it does not know how to do, is about to dispose of some shipping. It is understood that Kermit Roosevelt and Vincent Astor, in the east, and a western group, the Dollar Line interests, Herbert Fleishhacker of San Francisco and others, will make bids. The government of course will make no sale that would, now or later, involve foreign control of these American ships or a foreign flag over them.

What the government doesn't know about ships has cost the people about one thousand million dollars.

But we know at least that we ought to have SOME ships.

Rioting in Chicago's Negro quarter with several killings and 150,000 Chicago Negroes asking for protection, should cause hard thinking by those responsible for law and order.

When the Empire State building was dedicated in New York, Mr. Frederick Ecker, head of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., an able man, acquainted with American conditions, said the country was to be congratulated on having gone through two years of depression "without violence."

Let us hope that condition will continue.

DRY WARNING BALKS MOVE BY POLICE

Company, on Opening Here, Is Swamped by Thousands of Orders

Headquarters for distribution of wine-bricks were open in Boston today in a building on Tremont st.

The Vino Sano Sales Co., is the distributing organization.

It was swamped with orders.

Thousands of the bricks that can be converted into real wine by the addition of plain water and a few days of fermentation were sold here, the Boston Evening American found.

Police and federal authorities apparently were without power to stop the sale for the bricks are sold expressly for the purpose of making grape juice and WARNING is given that to allow fermentation would result in an alcoholic product.

ALL FLAVORS OFFERED

The bricks cost $2 apiece, any wine flavor—Burgundy, Muscatel, Sherry, Port or what's yours?

They were introduced recently in New York by the Vino Sano Distributors, Inc., and were warmly greeted by thonsands who didn't reveal whether they would take the neecssary precautions to prevent fermentation or not.

The New York success apparently is to be duplicated here.

California grape growers manufacture the product. Fruit Industries, Ltd., employing Mabel Walker Willebrandt, former government prohibition enforcer, has opposed sale of the bricks without result. Miss Willebrandt's firm manufactures grape juice that also might become wine in the home if precautions were not taken.

FULL DIRECTIONS

The "wine bricks" are merely the juices of various types of grapes, compressed into brick form and sold in packages.

On the label are full directions for preparing the fruit juices with the admonition that it must be consumed in five days, otherwise it may ferment and become wine.

Each brick produces one gallon of the fruit juice.

Of course the producers of the brick have issued the warning that such dire consequences might ensue and they certainly cannot be held morally nor legally responsible for teh ethical standards of their purchasers.

Whatever these standards are they have not been inimical to promoting the sale of the bricks, and it is understood that those promoting them have succeeded in making a wide distribution in Boston.

EIGHT CHILDREN SAVED IN FIRE

Eight children, including a six-months-old infant, were carried to safety early today when they were aroused from sleep in a smoke-filled house at No. 44 Federal st., Lynn.

The blaze started in the sitting room of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Casey on the first floor of the two-family house.

Casey was awakened first, aroused his family and then spread the alarm to Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Cross on the second floor.

Mrs. Cross wrapped her infant in a blanket and made her way through choking smoke to the street.

Cross went to the aid of the Caseys and helped them guide their seven children to safety.

The blaze caused heavy smoke damage.

Giving Pony a Ride in an Automobile Costs $5 Fine

Northampton, Aug. 5—A horse of another color was presented to the frowning jurisdiction of district court today when Ernest A. Aithier of Agawam was fined for giving a horse a ride instead of riding the horse.

Of course it was an abbreviated or pony edition of equine—a Shetland pony, if you insist—but it was the first Shetland pony State Trooper Joseph A. Keating had ever seen lolling back in the front seat of an automobile as it bowled along the highway.

There was also a friend of Aithier's in the back seat, but the friend wasn't a pony.

Trooper Keating unhorsed the automobile with some difficulty and Aithier, in court, paid $5 for emulating Barney Google with his "Pony Boy."

Firemen Carry Three Out of Burning Newtonville Home; Man Slides Down Pipe

Three people, including an aged woman and a child, were rescued by firemen and a man slid to safety down a rainpipe as flames swept through a house in Austin st., Newtonville, today.

Miss Elizabeth Benson, 75, was carried down a ladder by firemen of Ladder Company 1, after her escape from her second-floor room was cut off by flames in the stairway.

The firemen led Mrs. Earl G. Brooks and her daughter, Mary, 4, from their burning home after the fire had eaten away the gas meter in the basement, filling the house with gas fumes.

Jonah Milligan, 50, occupant of a room on the second floor, escaped by sliding down the gutter.

The fire, of unknown origin, was discovered by Mrs. Brooks in the basement of the house.

The flames spread to the upper floors through the stairway.

LEAVITT QUITS MEDFORD POST

After service of more than 20 years, Harry B. Leavitt, treasurer of the Medford sinking fund commission and former president of the board of aldermen, has resigned.

The resignation and its acceptance became known today after a closed conference of the aldermanic board with Mayor Edward H. Larkin.

Coming shortly after the end of the annual State audit, the resignation caused no little concern among city fathers and business associates of Leavitt.

The audit is now in the hands of Theodore N. Waddell, state director of accounts. Waddell said the results will not be made known for several weeks.

The aldermen were recessed for the summer a month ago and were hastily called together for last night's meeting.

Charles A. Barnes, vice-president of the Medford Trust Co., was appointed treasurer and James T. Dennison, director of the same bank, was chosen to fill the vacancy.

'Gum Drops' Cigars Gift Piques Hoover

Washington, Aug. 5—A box of "gum drops" given to President Hoover by J. R. Nutt, treasurer of the Republican National Committee, turned out to be cigars and the White House rather resented Nutt's statement that the President had a fondness for this type of confection.

In fact the President was so anxious to correct the impression that he sits at his desk eating candy that he sent the box of cigars out for inspection by the corps of reporters who had accepted Nutt's word for the contents.

MERCURY SOARS SCORCHING CITY

Sweltering heat, borne on gentle westerly winds, struck at Boston early today, carrying a threat of unrelieved sultriness for the next two days.

At 2:10 the mercury stood at 90, after a rapid climb from 70 at 7 o'clock this morning. There were indications in the forecast that the thermometer would rise well above 90 before the day was over.

Early in the day the rush to the beaches began. Warned by yesterday's foretaste of the torridity sweeping eastward from the Middle Western heat belt, throngs sought relief in the cooling waters.

The only possible relief from the new torrid spell may come tomorrow night with gentle showers which will bring a brief break, according to the weather man. The temporary coolness then will fade before a new heat wave, now moving toward New England from the Lake region.

Peril of Paralysis Closes Maine Camps

Augusta, Me., Aug. 5—All summer camps in Maine were advised today by state health authorities to eliminate public functions and to reduce contacts with outsiders to a minimum, because of the infantile paralysis danger

Dr. Clarence F. Kendall, state health commissioner, announced that circular letters embodying this suggestion were being sent to all camps.

As a result of this suggestion Camps Walden, Wyonegonic and Winona at Denmark, and Indian Acres and Forest Acres at Fryeburg, have been closed to all visitors to prevent introduction of the disease. Camp Rattutak at Fryeburg has been closed to visitors from New York and Connecticut.

Blazes a New Sky Trail With His Wife in Hazardous Trip Across Northern Wilds

Aklavik, Northwest Territories, Canada, Aug. 5—Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh landed here at 3:05 a. m. Pacific Coast Standard Time, (7:05 a. m. Boston daylight time) today, completing a 1115 mile flight from Baker Lake.

The flying Lindberghs left Baker Lake at 7:35 p. m., Boston time, last night. The hop to their last Canadian stop took approximately 11½ hours.

DOGS BARK WELCOME

Never before has the Northwest Territories been spanned in a single jump, even by the fearless Northland fliers whose livelihood is made in flying over the lake-dotted tundra country.

Word of their arrival was sent over a chain of radio stations along the Mackenzie river to Edmonton, Alta.

Point Barrow, northernmost tip of Alaska, had been set for their next stop on their vacation trip to the Orient, but due to ice conditions the U. S. Coast Guard cutter Northland carrying fuel and supplies for the plane, radioed today that it would be unable to reach the little settlement in time to meet the fliers.

As a result the Lindberghs may fly directly to the cutter and refuel there. The Northland is now at Icy Cape, about 150 miles south of Point Barrow.

LORD READING TO WED IN DIPLOMATIC ROMANCE

BRIDE WILL BE 'WOMAN WHO MADE HIM'

Noted British Statesman, 70, Wins Heart and Love of His Aid, 37

London, Aug. 5 (AP)—The Marquis of Reading, once ambassador to the United States and later Viceroy of India, will be married tomorrow to the young woman who aided him in his rise to the rank of one of Great Britain's foremost statesmen.

Lord Reading

His engagement to Miss Stella Charnaud, daughter of the late Charles Charnaud, who represented Great Britain on the international public debt mission to Turkey, was announced today. Lord Reading is 70 years of age and she is 37.

Miss Charnaud was a member of the vice-regal staff when Lord Reading was in India and returned with him to England in a similar capacity when he was succeeded by Lord Irwin. She became his chief assistant in all political matters and played an active role in his work in behalf of India at the first round table conference. The marquis' first wife, the former Alice Edith Cohen, died here in March 1930.

ONCE CABIN BOY

News of the engagement recalled Lord Reading's steady gravitation from the son of a London merchant to high honors from the Empire. Born Rufus Daniel Isaacs, he started his career as a cabin boy, running away to sea at the age of 14, and spent two years on a sailing ship which often took him to the land he would one day rule.

After an unsuccessful venture on the stock exchange, he studied law and was admitted to the bar in 1887. He represented the district of Reading in the House of Commons for many years as a Liberal in association with David Lloyd George. He was president of the Anglo-French loan mission to the United States in 1915 and high commissioner and special ambassador to the United States in 1918. He was elevated to the rank of marquis on his return from India.

MADE HER HIS AID

Miss Charnaud is described as a remarkable woman and a brilliant linguist and as having a rare grasp of public affairs. Educated privately, she took her first business appointment seven years ago when she joined Lord Reading's staff.

So impressed was he with her administrative ability that he made her chief of all his business and political interests when his vice-regal term ended. The story is told that she struck an American business magnate visiting in London so favorably that he offered her $25,000 a year to join his firm.

Zepp Flight Booms Air Transport Trade

Berlin, Aug. 5 (AP)—The polar flight of the Graf Zeppelin has revived interest in aerial transport, but reports that Soviet Russia has ordered two German airships were denied today by Capt. Ernst Lehmann of the Zeppelin Works.

Although Soviet air experts have paid frequent visits to the Zeppelin factory at Friedrichshafen, no orders have been placed. Capt. Lehmann said other countries, including Japan and Holland, were evincing increased interest in Zeppelins.

BAN ON UNSAFE PICNIC TRUCK

A drive against trucks which carry picnic parties under improper operation or improper supervision, or which are improperly equipped, was launched today by the Governor's Committee on Street and Highway Safety.

In initiating its drive, the committee sent out questionnaires to 450 owners of truck fleets, totaling approximately 14,000 trucks, in an attempt to determine the truck owners' reactions in the matter of outing groups on trucks.

The committee's findings in its survey will be used as a basis in establishing supervision over trucks which carry such groups.

SAFETY FIRST THOUGHT.

In the questionnaires, truck owners are asked if they allow their trucks to be used for passenger-carrying, what the seating accommodations are, what supervision is exercised by owners, how competent are drivers, and other pertinent questions.

Stating that the type of people who utilize this means of transportation to go on outings, are people who most need the outings, the committee declared in announcing its campaign.

"Whether a transportation company bus or a covered wagon carries picnic parties to the popular resorts is not the concern of the committee, but it is very much the concern of the committee that the picnickers reach their destinations safely and later their homes—and not a hospital.

MENACE ON HIGHWAY.

"Trucks that are overcrowded or improperly equipped are a menace on the highway to their passengers and to other cars. Trucks which are driven by incompetent operators are a hazard.

"Regardless of who is to blame for any particular accident, the danger of serious injury to occupants of the truck involved is far greater than to passengers in a vehicle designed for passenger purposes.

"Trucks improperly operated and lighted are a highway menace so gerat as to warrant measures of the most strenuous kind."

MRS. RANSDELL IS BRIDE OF SABIN'S SON

Broker Marries Gloucester Divorcee Week After His Wife Gets Decree

Gloucester, Aug. 5—Nevada arithmetic—one divorce plus one divorce equals one marriage—has united Mrs. Dorothy Laymen Ransdell and Charles H. Sabin, Jr., the Boston Evening American learned today.

The Eastern Point society divorcee was married to the son of the chairman of the board of the Guaranty Trust Co. of New York at "Bayberry Ledge," here on July 27, a week after his first wife had divorced him at Reno.

Mrs. Ransdell was divorced at Reno last October. She was formerly the wife of Dr. Robert R. Ransdell of Washington.

"Bayberry Ledge" is the estate of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Abbott Laymen.

$1,000,000 SETTLEMENT.

Marriage intentions were filed here on July 24, a few days after Ruth Ogden Sabin divorced her husband at Reno. He is reported to have settled $1,000,000 on the former New Jersey society girl and their infant son. He withdrew a divorce action of his own to make way for hers.

Both Sabin and Mrs. Ransdell gave the same Reno address for residency. They obtained a waiver of the five-day law from Judge Sumner D. York and were married by Rev. Clarence Cowing, pastor of the fashionable Universalist Church.

Among those present at the ceremony were Mr. and Mrs. Dexter Blagdan of New York and Red Bank, N. J., parents of the bride, and her two children, Nancy and Bobbie, aged 13 and 11, respectively.

CHANGED HIS MIND

Sabin and his bride left on a motor tour. They have been in New York for a few days. At the time he was divorced he denied he planned to wed Mrs. Ransdell, saying:

"I am not going to marry her or anybody else; I have all the trouble I want."

Sabin is commander of The Crusaders, that organization fighting prohibition. In his marriage intentions he gave his occupation as mining.

He once started on a night club career as partner of Eleanor Ambrose, the dancing widow of Maurice.

2 WOMEN HURT BY 'WILD' AUTO

Gloucester, Aug. 5—A Gloucester woman is dying and her sister was severely injured when a driverless automobile backed down the incline on Washington st. and pinned them against a fence.

Both women were unconscious when picked up by passing motorists and rushed to the hospital.

The women are Mrs. Charles Carroll, 50 years old, of Carlyle st. and her sister, Mrs. Edward Daigle, 40, of School st. Little hope is entertained for the recovery of Mrs. Carroll. Physicians said they may have to amputate her left leg.

Immediately after the accident, according to Gloucester police, the operator of the car which was parked on Washington st., appeared from a nearby building raced over to the fence where the machine had crashed, jumped into the car and sped away in the direction of Magnolia.

LINDBERGHS AT ARCTIC GOAL

of a northern twilight, Lindbergh and his wife were greeted by a chorus of howls from hundreds of husky dogs on the river bank as the big plane landed gracefully on the Mackenzie River.

GREETED BY NATIVES

As soon as word of their landing spread, the residents of this town turned out en masse to greet the great flier and his wife.

Their plane was made fast to the river bank and as they stepped out Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh found themselves before a group of traders, trappers, mounted police, missionaries, several wireless operators and the few white women who reside here.

In the background Indians and Eskimos who had trekked hundreds of miles from the wilderness to see the famous flier about whom they had heard so much.

The well-known Lindbergh smile flashed from the cockpit of the monoplane as it taxied to the bank. Mrs. Lindbergh smiling happily, waved a greeting to the group on the bank.

Both fliers looked fresh and cheerful despite the gruelling night hop over the Arctic wilderness.

At Aklavik, the Lindberghs completed more than 3001 miles of their 7000-mile tour from New York to Tokio. They have completed five hops in as many days, resting overnight after each jump. The Baker Lake-Aklavik trip was the first to extend through the night.

U. S. CHAMBER FOR BUSINESS MEN'S COUNCIL

Leaders Throughout Country Are Quizzed on Feasibility of Organization

New York, Aug. 5 (AP)—The Chamber of Commerce of the United States is canvassing the nation's business leaders for their opinions on the feasibility of a national planning council for America.

In a letter and questionnaire signed by Henry I. Harriman, chairman of the Chamber's committee on the continuity of business and employment, the business men are asked.

"Is it feasible, in your opinion, to set up a permanent national economic planning board or council to follow economic and business conditions, to propose ways and means for current coordination of production and consumption, and generally to devise measures which will tend to promote continuity in business and unemployment?"

The charge is made in some quarters, Mr. Harriman explains in his letter, that American business has failed to display real leadership in dealing with the recent and current economic conditions.

"There are undoubtedly responsibilities for business men," he says. "It can be stated with equal assurance that many of these responsibilities are being met. The real question is how far there are other responsibilities which business should undertake."

Already members of the Gloucester committee have gone over the unofficial sheets of preceding seasons and estimate that the cost on this end will be about $15,000. There's no doubt that it can be obtained.

The series, if one is arranged, would be sailed off Halifax.

PLOT TO BOMB BANKER FOILED

The dynamite was wired to batteries and an electric switch. An accompanying note threatened the banker with destruction. Apparently someone had planned to present the note at a bank, demanding $25,000 and had intended, if refused, to detonate the explosives. The note said in part:

"I have enough dynamite in the folder I am holding to blow both of us off the face of the earth—it is connected with dry cell batteries and the switch I am holding will instantly set it off.

"Telephone one of your commercial tellers and instruct him to personally bring $25,000 to your office at once."

EDISON'S HOLD ON LIFE WEAK

West Orange, N. J., Aug. 5 (AP)—Thomas A. Edison is held to life only by frayed strands of health, Dr. Hubert S. Howe told reporters today.

He said that although the 84-year-old inventor had showed marked and rapid improvement he was not yet "out of immediate danger."

"His condition is like the fraying out of an elevator rope," Dr. Howe said. "The elevator functions until the last strand breaks. The outside looks all right. All that is left for the engineer to do is to protect the last few strands."

The physician said, however, Edison has a chance "of coming out of this and living for some time."

Dr. Howe's bulletin, which he amplified in his talk with newspapermen, follows:

"Yesterday afternoon Mr. Edison took a short ride, and he did not seem to be unfavorably affected by it.

"He had a restless night, but, despite this, is bright and cheerful and seems slightly improved."

SURGERY AIDS CANCER VICTIM

New Haven, Ct., Aug. 5 (AP)—Dr. Nelson A. Ludington, graduate of Yale Medical School, now in private practice here, today made known the curative results of an operation he performed for facial cancerous growth and upon which also he is carrying through treatment for repair of tissue destroyed by that growth.

In January Dr. Ludington operated, and after removal of the growth a cavity was left in the cheek tissue. From then until last month the patient was treated with X-ray and radium.

The surgeon took from Cassidy's chest a strip of skin, grafting one end to a blood vessel in the breast and the other end to the tissue in the cheek cavity. This strip formed a tube, its purpose being to provide nourishment for new tissue.

In a few weeks Dr. Ludington expects to sever the tube at the breast and reduce the cheek tissue to normal appearance.

'Dream' Ends 'Shoot to Kill' Man Hunt in Boston

QUEST HALTED AS PRISONER CHANGES STORY

Captive Admits He Didn't See Abbott, One of the State Prison Fugitives

Search in Roxbury and the South End by officers with "shoot to kill" orders for Ernest Abbott, escaped State prison convict, was abandoned this afternoon when Harry J. McCarthy, also an escaped prisoner, admitted his story of chumming with Abbott was a "dream."

McCarthy, arrested after robbing a Chinese laundry on Clarendon st. last night, said he and Abbott were desperately in need of money. He gave the police two addresses which were unsuccessfully raided by large squads of heavily armed police.

SENT BACK TO JAIL

Before being taken to municipal court today, McCarthy, having slept off the effects of liquor, could not even remember having talked about Abbott.

He pleaded guilty to robbing the laundry of $4.60 and was sentenced to a year in the House of Correction, which he must serve in addition to finishing his state prison term. He escaped from the Rutland prison camp a week ago.

McCarthy was sentenced to State Prison from Boston just a year ago yesterday, getting a term of three to five years for breaking, entering and larceny. He was a good prisoner and was transferred to Rutland on Feb. 11.

Warden James L. Hogsett went to Boston police headquarters to talk with him early today and McCarthy expressed regret at having betrayed the warden's trust in him. Warden Hogsett said that McCarthy and Abbott did not know each other in prison as Abbott was not sent there until May 13 of this year.

FLED WEEK AGO

Abbott escaped from the Charlestown prison on July 29 with Hugh Quigley and Thomas Gilpatrick. These two were recaptured the next morning.

It became known today that they chose that date for their escape because the machine gunner regularly stationed on the wall overlooking the railroad yards was having a day off, and his substitute could not operate the sub-machine gun.

There are two sub-machine guns on the prison walls, one on each side of the prison, both operated by young men who are trained in the use of them.

DAWES' GIRL PAYS $3 FINE

Evanston, Ill., Aug. 5 (AP)—The price of a 45 mile an hour ride through Evanston, to Virginia Dawes, was $3 and costs.

"We all have to be diplomatic," observed Justice Harry H. Porter to the proxy for the young daughter of America's diplomat at the Court of St. James, Ambassador Charles G. Dawes. An Evanston banker appeared for the camera-shy Miss Dawes.

The plea was "not guilty" of speeding, and the defense—Miss Dawes was driving a new eight-cylinder sedan instead of her four-cylinder roadster and didn't realize how much faster it would travel.

"I've heard better stories," the magistrate commented.

MANSION BURNS AT PLYMOUTH

The house, which was wooden, contained 15 rooms. The buildings were equipped with all modern apparatus and electricity.

HOLY LAND DEAL IN SUIT HERE

Misplaced confidence in their agent is alleged in a bill in equity filed today in Superior Court by the Mizrachi Women's Organization of America, Inc., against Mollie Karlsberg, president of the Boston chapter.

In the bill it is alleged that President Karlsberg was sent to Palestine by the organization to buy a lot of land on which would be constructed an educational school for girls.

The Boston president bought the land, but put the title in her own name and now refuses to surrender it, according to the allegations.

Judge Henry T. Lummus has issued a temporary order restraining President Karlsberg from deeding or mortgaging the property pending final disposition of the case.

ARSON LAID TO FIRE-FIGHTER

Westfield, Aug. 5 (AP)—Richard F. Bey, 52, a well known real estate and insurance broker, was arrested today and arraigned charged with setting fire with intent to collect insurance in connection with a fire that early today resulted in damage estimated at $4,000 to $7,000 to an 11-room vacant dwelling which he owned.

He pleaded not guilty and was held in $5000 for a hearing August 19. The arrest was made by State Fire Inspector Howard Whittemore, who investigated the fire.

Bey is a member of the call force of the fire department which responded to the alarm and helped fight the fire. The fire was plainly of incendiary origin. Pans of gasoline were found in every room with devices for assuring a quick spreading of the flames.

Charges Husband Tried to Attack Her and Turns in False Fire Alarm

Seeking her husband, Edwin, whom she suspected of being somewhere where he shouldn't be, Mrs. Mary Ellen Olson, 28, of Eustis st., Roxbury, attractive mother of two children, turned in a fire alarm in Dorchester early today.

When the firemen arrived and inquired the whereabouts of the blaze she pointed to a house and said:

"In there."

The firemen rushed in with hose lines. There was no fire there. Neither was Olson there.

Mrs. Olson went home and later when Olson arrived, she climbed out a bedroom window in her pajamas, according to her own story.

She complained to police of the Dudley st. station that Olson had attempted to assault her and they advised her to seek a warrant. Her husband, she told authorities, left her on July 4.

BEEDY HITS BIG 'BEAR PLOT'

Crystal Lake, Me., Aug. 5 (AP)—Congressman Carroll L. Beedy of the First Maine district today charged a "conspiracy" by local and foreign bankers and brokers who were "playing politics and realizing profits in bear market operations at the expense of the American people."

Beedy told the Cumberland County grange that if there were further depression of the stock market "by these interests" he would introduce a bill at the next session of Congress to reveal "the identity of these conspirators," who seek to "undermine the welfare of the country."

He decried the fact that information obtained by the board of governors of the New York Stock Exchange concerning operations of those on the bear side of the market was not made public.

"I believe the American people have a right to know, and want to know, what interests in this country are willing to enrich themselves not only by destroying confidence in the government and business, but who are willing to press unconscienceable profits in the face of widespread suffering by the many," he said.

"I am informed this combination of local and foreign capital is making every effort to forestall the return of prosperity by planning to depress stock quotations further in August or September."

2 ARE HELD IN $580,000 FRAUD

New York, Aug. 5 (AP)—Accused of defrauding Mrs. Ella De Bevoise Patterson, widow of William Patterson, former Curtis Publications executive, out of more than half of the $1,000,000 estate her husband left her, Philip J. Barnes, Glen Ridge, N. J., and Ernest Suffern, Montclair, N. J., were held today by Magistrate William A. Ferrell for hearing Friday on charges of suspicion of grand larceny.

Bail was denied to Barnes because he has a criminal record, and Suffern's bail was set at $50,000.

Specifically, the men were charged with suspicion of the theft of $11,821 on July 29, 1930, but Deputy Atty.-Gen. Morris Weinfeld said her total loss was $580,000, and that she is now obliged to live on money advanced by friends.

POUND SLUMP JOLTS LONDON

London, Aug. 5 (AP)—The sudden slump of the pound sterling today came as a jolt and set experts guessing as to the underlying causes.

"Nerves" in Paris, about the possible result of the Prussian Diet referendum next Sunday was described in many quarters as the reason why the franc hardened from 123.90 to 123.50, and the pound shared the corresponding weakness in New York.

It was pointed out, on the other hand, that it would be extremely illogical for the Bank of France to grant a $125,000,000 credit to the Bank of England and then withdraw support from the pound.

Meanwhile, the pound recovered from the low level toward the close of the market.

PORT PUBLICITY NEEDED ABROAD

A European campaign of publicity for the port of Boston was urged today by George P. Tilton, executive secretary of the Boston port authority, who returned from a study of European ports.

Tilton was one of more than 100 passengers to arrive at Commonwealth pier aboard the Hamburg-American liner St. Louis.

"Boston as a port is greatly retarded by lack of publicity in European ports," he said.

"It never will expand as a port until the proper amount of recognition is obtained for it there."

Tilton will make a more complete report to the port authority.

The arrival of the St. Louis marked the return of many more European vacationists here.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl A. Wallin of Main st., Brockton, finished a belated honeymoon, Miss Margaret Gallagher of Greenfield st., Mattapan, returned from a lengthy visit in Ireland and Florence A. Sternburg of Mayfield st., Dorchester, returned from a tour of the continent.

LONDON AWAITS GANDHI GIRL IN 1-PIECE GARB

London, Aug. 5 (INS)—Miss Madeline Slade, former English society girl and now a disciple of Mahatma Gandhi, will be dressed in no more than a one-piece garment when she returns to her native land with the famous Indian leader this month, her friends revealed today.

Miss Slade will be one of a large group of Gandhi followers who will come with him for the round-table conference on Indian afairs. All of the party will maintain the rigorous simplicity of their lives in India.

The Anglo-Indian girl, now known as Shrimati Mira Bei, altered her whole mode of living to follow the teachings of Gandhi following a meeting with one of his followers in Paris.

Over the protest of friends and relatives she went to India and was taken into Gandhi's group. She renounced all of her old life to take up the exotic but simple life advocated by him.

The garment which she wears was spun by Gandhi himself. While here she will eat just as she does in her adopted country, partaking only of goat's milk and vegetables.

Once, as the daughter of Lady Slade, who died recently, she lived in luxurious rooms. Miss Slade will live in one of the cell-like rooms reserved for them in Kingsley st. settlement.

'KILLS' HUSBAND TO WIN MOTHER OF EIGHT

Waterbury, Ct., Aug. 5 (AP)—Mrs. Beulah Duncan, 33, widow of George Duncan, 39, who was slain in a secluded shack in Wolcott by Joseph W. Wright, 36, a fellow sewing machine salesman, today was held in $2000 bonds as a material witness.

The arrest was made during a coroner's inquest when Mrs. Duncan volunteered information which police said was of great importance.

Wright, a former resident of Washburn, Me., where he met the Duncans, natives of that place, confessed to the slaying, police said, which was the aftermath of an argument over the former's attentions paid Duncan's wife, mother of eight children.

Wright, in his confession, said he wrested the gun from Duncan's hand and then fired five shots into his body. Police said Wright told them Duncan had intended to shoot him.

Mrs. Duncan previously told police, Wright, who was divorced by his wife in Maine a year ago, "loved her insanely" and authorities are proceeding on the theory that Wright plotted the slaying.

"He told me repeatedly that if I didn't run away with him he would kill my husband," Mrs. Duncan said, "but I didn't think he meant it. I couldn't go with him and leave my eight children."

Mrs. Duncan told police Wright called at her home and told her something had happened to her husband, but that he wanted her to go out for lunch, and then a movie with him before he told her any details. After the movie they went to a side road and parked in his automobile, she said. When Wright left her at her home, he told her:

"Now I am going to tell police what happened to your husband."

BISHOP LOSES BOY FRIEND

London, Aug. 5 (AP)—Two devoted friends—the Bishop of London and a boy who became an invalid from a football accident—have been parted by death.

The friendship began some years ago when Dr. Winnington-Ingram met the lad walking. He learned that his name was Allen Beaumont Bessey and that his father had been killed in the war. Thereafter he acted as a kind of adopted father to the boy.

A few months ago Allen was injured at football. Complications set in and he was taken to a London nursing home. Every day the bishop found time to spend at least a quarter of an hour at the bedside of his young friend.

The bishop decided to move him to his own residence. The boy, his mother and a nurse all moved to Fulham palace.

The bishop then arranged for him to be buried as near the palace as possible, and in a quiet green corner at All Saints' Church his grave was dug.

May Christie

During the vacation of Betty Alden, her daily column, "Beacon Hill," will be replaced by this column of interesting New York society and literary gossip by May Christie, famous English writer, now living in the metropolis and writing of her experiences there.

ARE YOU GOING TO SCOTLAND?

New York, Aug. 5.

THE LAND OF CAKES! Also . . . contrary to the droll stories . . . of Great Hospitality!

You should sail this week . . . and the sooner the better, because August 12 is the opening of the shooting season in Bonnie Scotland!

MAY CHRISTIE

Till then, the grouse are left in peace . . . but oh! the disturbance among those moorland birds from daybreak on the Glorious Twelfth, onwards . . .

The very first place you must visit in Scotland is its beautiful capital city of Edinburgh!

It never occurred to me that Edinburgh was so dee-vinely lovely until I had left it, been all over the world . . . and then re-visited my old home.

It is a classic city. Built on green hills. And the sea beyond.

Edinburgh's "Main Street"

The two best places to stay in . . . if you want to be right in the midst of the shops . . . are the large hostelries at the two railroad stations . . . the North British and Caledonian Hotels.

Neither of them has central-heating, dear heart . . . but for 60 cents you can make up your own dear little fire to warm you in your oft-times (even during the height of the summer) chilly bedroom!

These range hotels are both located in Princes' st. . . . which is Edinburgh's Main st. . . . and, incidentally, has often been acclaimed (by those who ought to know) as the loveliest thoroughfare in the world!

On one side are classic buildings (shops, hotels and offices) . . . on the other undulating green Gardens, from the center of which, like the Chrysler Building, towers up Edinburgh Castle on its e-nor-mous rock!

This sight startles the newcomer. It is unbelievably beautiful.

* * *

In Days of Old

Be sure to visit the famous old Castle, perched so high above the city, with its drawbridge, moat, and amazing history . . .

The terribly ancient High Street winds its way narrowly from the Castle down to Holyrood Palace.

From the high windows where the Scottish Nobles and their Lovely Ladies used to dwell now hang the family washing, and the most appallingly-tousled heads . . . !

For alas! where the Bonnie Earl of Moray used to ride so gallantly after a victory is now Edinburgh's slums . . .

I always shiver when I pass the "close" (entrance) to Burke and Hare's old house . . .

They were the two men who for years lured people in . . . even tiny children . . . with soft words . . . then murdered them and sold their bodies to the Medical Schools for dissecting purposes . . . !

Needless to say, they ended on the gallows!

This was over a hundred years ago, please note . . . I must explain this quickly . . . because I myself have six doctors in my immediate family who are all graduates of Edinburgh University . . . !

* * *

Holyrood Palace was the seat of the Scottish Kings before England grabbed off James the First to become monarch of both countries!

Queen Mary and King George reside there for a couple of weeks practically every summer now . . . and deah old Edinburgh . . . (affectionately called "Auld Reekie" by those that live there) . . . certainly wakes up during the Royal occupancy . . .

Balls . . . garden-parties . . . levees . . . processions in State Coaches with white-wigged horsemen on snow-white chargers . . . you never saw anything to equal the display, even in the movies . . . ! Holyrood Palace is where the lovely, ill-fated, flirtatious, red-haired and romantic Mary Queen of Scots dwelt (poor souls!) centuries ago . . .

She had just come from her Gay France . . . and found Scotland's 'dour' capital terribly slow . . .

Therefore, to liven things up, she flirted with the handsome Courtiers, Lord This, Lord That . . . and even had une grande affaire, with one of her Court musicians . . . a little Italian called Rizzio!

* * *

Lord Darnley murdered the passionate young Latin outside the Queen's boudoir one ill-fated night . . . every time I go to Edinburgh I have a shuddery look at Rizzio's bloodstains on the old wood floor, which still clearly show . . . !

The climate of the Scottish capital might be described as extremely bracing . . .

Did you ever read what Robert Louis Stevenson has to say about it, in his interesting book (which you ought to get) called "Edinburgh" . . . ?

He says:

"The vilest climate under high heaven! The delicate die young . . . and those who live on, live to wish they had died too . . ."

Well, I was one of those who survived . . . both healthily and happily all the way through!

Robert Louis Stevenson adored Scotland, all his young days were spent on a pretty farm just outside Edinburgh, with acres of green undulating land . . . called "Swanston" . . .

* * *

You must take a trip from Edinburgh to the Forth Bridge . . . one of the Wonders of the World . . . that spans the Firth of Forth.

And don't forget to lunch in the Hawes Inn, almost underneath a span of the bridge . . . and centuries old . . . if you ever read Sir Walter Scott's novels you'll know all about the Hawes Inn, and the smugglers, and the romance of the place.

Quiet Birthday for Hoover at Camp

Washington, Aug. 5—President Hoover will celebrate his 57th birthday anniversary next Monday surrounded by a few friends in the seclusion of his Rapidan camp.

Mrs. Hoover is making the plans for the informal little party, as she has done in the past and is personally making the birthday cake. She also intends to arrange a few surprises in table decoration and entertainment for the Chief Executive.

There will probably be not more than six or eight guests. These have not been selected, but if custom is followed they will be from the list of personal friends, rather than political life.

Betty Pope to Wed Sept. 10

Only the intimate families will be present when Miss Betty Wightman Pope becomes the bride of Mr. Paul Agassiz Shaw on Thursday, Sept. 10, at the summer residence of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Linder Pope, at The Plains, Manchester.

Mr. Shaw, son of Mrs. Robert Gould Shaw, 2d, and the late Mr. Shaw of Boulder Farm, Newton Centre, will have Mr. Louis A. Shaw, 2d, for his best man.

Miss Pope will be attended by Miss Clarice Palmer of Brookline and Miss Martha Stearns of Wellesley Hills, as bridesmaids, and Miss Lucy Linder Pope as maid of honor.

The ceremony, which will be at 4 o'clock, will be followed by a reception.

Stillman Through With Matrimony

New York, Aug. 5—James A. Stillman, banker, on his return from England on the liner Olympic denied he intends to remarry.

"I do intend to remarry and cannot say it with too much emphasis," the banker said.

He added that he had passed most of the two months in England, but had visited Southern France briefly to see Mrs. Brown Potter, mother of the former Mrs. Stillman.

Wanted Nuptial Garb Three Times

Washington, Aug. 5 (INS)—Robert Zipf, this city, today filed a petition for a divorce from Mrs. Jean Compton Zipf of Rockford, Ill.

The husband harkened back to his wedding day to cite an instance to support his charge. His petition said his bride-to-be searched for a trousseau in three cities and finally wore her sister's dress at the wedding.

SOCIETY LEADERS FLOCK TO MARBLEHEAD FOR GALA RACING

YACHTING THEIR HOBBY

MR. BROWN MISS BURRAGE

MISS ALICE BURRAGE who had Mr. Kenneth Brown as her crew in one of yesterday's races on the Race Week program at Marblehead. She is the daughter of the Russell Burrages of Beverly Farms and prominent in the young set on the North Shore.

Many Fetes on Yacht Clubs' Programs

We have said a little about Marblehead, race week, and the boats, but we have not mentioned a word about the people sailing them. Yesterday we saw them, in fact, had lunch with a couple of them, and tried very hard to appear as if we understood every nautical term they used, all the time endeavoring to learn a little something of what was really happening.

The Eastern Yacht Club porches and floats seemed to be the centre of attraction, so we waited around looking for prey, in the shape of couples and groups to pose for us. What luck!

Cohasset Folk Attend

A crowd had been swimming off the Malaba, one of the many beautiful steam yachts in the harbor, and along came the Misses Margaret and Rosamond Emerson among them shouting us a welcome, so that we cheered up considerably, and went right to work "getting them." They are the charming daughters of Mrs. Warren K. Emerson and the late Mr. Emerson of Chestnut Hill, and one may always be sure of seeing them somewhere in the vicinity of the Eastern. "Margy" and "Roddy" as they are known to their friends, are sub and post debs respectively.

Then who should we see but some of our old Cohasset friends, Miss Frances and Miss Mary McElwain, who with Miss Katherine ("Kady") Johnson, won the Herreshoff 17-foot class Monday with the Shooting Star, defeating by a small matter of seconds, the Eagle Wing, owned and sailed by R. P. Waters, Jr., who had Taggart Whipple as crew. The McElwains are the daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Franklin McElwain of Boston and Cohasset.

Bar Harbor Events

Another group of smiling Cohassetites included the Misses Arsene De Rosset and Barbara Fitch who, with Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Stoughton Bell, were all just about to jump into Mr. McElwain's speed boat to follow the races, as they didn't bring their own boat to Marblehead this year. We caught the latter on the run and they just had to say they were off on Friday for Bar Harbor to attend the Kent-Van Alen wedding.

The Reginald Fosters, whose baby son, Reggie, Jr., was being wheeled up and down in front of the club also came in a very close second Monday, though in another class. Little Reggie couldn't tell us this as he seemed to be having rather a hard time with some teeth, but anyway we saw his mother and father off in the distance, and wished them a silent "better luck" for this afternoon's race.

To go back to Bar Harbor, or rather to look ahead at some Bar Harbor events, we hear that the Harry Hill Thorndikes of Boston, are prominent among the summer colonists up there and that their two daughters, Miss Winifred Thorndike and Mrs. Charles B. Delafield, are among the girls chosen to model some of the newest styles at the Fashion Show on Tuesday evening, August 11, for the benefit of the Bar Harbor Hospital.

Mrs. John S. Rogers of Tuxedo, Park, N. Y., will be in charge of this affair, and has persuaded Miss Audrey Barret, also of New York, who was presented at the Court of St. James this season, to be one of the many mannequins.

Mrs. Thorndike, who is assisting Mrs. Rogers, is entertaining at a large dinner-party on Friday, in honor of her brother-in-law and sister, Col. and Mrs. Francis L. V. Hoppin of New York:

Tennis matches arranged and sponsored by the National Lawn Tennis Association are also taking place this week for the officers and men of the U. S. S. Augusta and Richmond, who have put in for a few days.

25,000 Attend Concert on Esplanade

More than 25,000 gathered on the Esplanade and surface of the nearby Charles river last night to hear the request night program conducted by Arthur Fiedler.

About 9000 chairs—all on hand—were sold to music lovers more than an hour before the program began. Traffic police reported the largest number of automobiles parked in Beacon st. and adjacent streets this year.

Arab and Jewish Clashes Feared

Jerusalem, Aug. 5 (AP)—Fears of a renewal of conflicts between Jews and Arabs throughout Palestine, originating in a tense communal atmosphere similar to that of 1929, today led outlying Jewish colonies to ask for police protection.

SOCIETY GIRLS HELD CAPTIVE; ONE SLAIN

Birmingham, Ala., Aug 5—Three Birmingham society girls were shot; one fatally, as they were fired on by a Negro who had held them captive in a wooded section near the exclusive Mountain Brook residential section, last night.

The dead girl was Miss Augusta Williams. The wounded are her sister, Miss Nell Williams, shot in the right arm, and Miss Jennie Wood, shot in the spine. Miss Wood's condition was reported as serious.

Miss Augusta Williams died in a hospital shortly after the shooting. Her father, Clark Williams, is a prominent Birmingham attorney.

Miss Nell Williams told police that she and her sister and Miss Wood were driving along the Leeds highway when a Negro jumped on their car and ordered them to drive into the woods. She said the Negro kept them captive for about four hours and then began insulting them.

Miss Williams said she jumped at the Negro and attempted to get away, but he started firing, and then fled.

Shortly afterwards Miss Williams made her way to a nearby home and summoned police.

An intensive manhunt was started immediately, police being augmented by a posse of hundreds of citizens.

GRASSHOPPERS WIDEN RUIN

Washington, Aug. 5 (AP)—Grasshoppers ravaging the fields of Northwest and Central states have broadened their range to 50 miles a day by taking to their wings and have left little hope for their control this season.

This information was made public today by Dr. W. H. Larrimer, entomologist, on the basis of reports received by the Agriculture Department yesterday. He said the poisoning campaign in the infested states was being conducted actively and that by continuing it throughout the fall and next spring the damage from almost certain outbreaks next year might be minimized.

MORE IDLE AS OIL WELLS STOP

Oklahoma City, Aug. 5 (AP)—Gov. William H. "Alfalfa Bill" Murray has carried out a threat to shut down Oklahoma oil wells under martial law in an effort to increase prices for crude oil. He named the "supreme executive power of the state" as his authority.

National guardsmen invaded the giant Oklahoma City oil field without appreciable opposition and headed toward new objectives. The governor's orders are to close all of the state's 3106 wells that have a daily average production of 25 barrels or more.

Published reports were that more then 7500 persons would be left jobless by the closing of the wells.

The order, coming at the end of several days of impatient waiting by independent operators suffering from low crude prices, decreed that each well should remain closed until purchasers agreed to pay a minimum of $1 per barrel at the wells. Fifty cents was the top yesterday.

THE LOVES OF CHARLIE CHAPLIN

King of Laughs and World's Unluckiest Lover

(Copyright, 1931, by the Boston Evening American)

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE

Marie Doro, English actress, one of many women who captivated Charlie Chaplin, always stood far above others in the film star's affection.

(Charlie Chaplin is Hollywood's "Man of many loves." He has been reported engaged to more women than any three of his colleagues combined. Women have sought him out in the hope of basking in the glory of his majestic presence. To be seen with Charlie was almost equivalent to being a possible Mrs. Chaplin. Of his brief love interlude with Marie Doro, English actress, today's installment reveals a love, fine and noble.)

CHAPTER 3—MARIE ENTERS HIS LIFE

To Charlie Chaplin, Marie Doro was the Juliet of beautiful women.

Of all his loves, his interlude with Marie Doro was the only one to achieve spirituality.

Charlie actually worshipped Marie. For a long time his admiration was silent. He stood by and watched her reverently. He revelled in the magnetism of her charm and the exquisiteness of her beauty as it thrilled English audiences.

About Marie, Charlie said:

"She is an artist to the tips of her fingers."

Charlie was a dilletante and young. He didn't dare approach the "beautiful princess."

But some day—

To him she was like a queen, stately, pleasing to the eye and to the mind.

Charlie saw and fell in love with Marie when both played the same bill in a London music hall. With William Gillette, Charlie played "Billy the Page Boy," in an abbreviated version of "Sherlock Holmes."

IN LOVE WITH HER

Then Charlie returned to America for his second sojourn in the new country. The all-grasping eye of cinemaland was on him. Charles was inveigled into the silents. He began his career of fame.

Fate also brought Marie Doro to America. The enchanting actress took Broadway by storm.

And on the Gay White Way of the Big City, Charlie and Marie again met—two artists—two successes—two kindred souls, appreciative of each other's talents.

Four years of intensive success were chalked up for Charlie's record. He not only injected a brand new idea of comedy into his comic disguise, but he pantomimed an idea of fun-making into his first picture that stamped him for life a reputable film artist, incomparable and inimitable.

SIGNS FOR MILLION

He arrived in Hollywood in 1914. In 1918 he electrified the world by signing a contract with First National Exhibitors for $1,000,000 binding a contract that called for eight two-reel sessions of Chaplin farce.

The little English actor was bewildered. This was far beyond his hopes and aspirations. But behind his plaintive acceptance of it all, was a shrewd understanding of his own worth in dollars and cents on the screen.

And then the country went to war. The sound of guns, the stampede of arms, the silencing fear of approaching submarines in Atlantic waters weighed down the country's people.

Influential, important, appealing men and women were solicited to tour the country in the interest of Liberty Loans, and in 1918, Charlie Chaplin, an Englishman by birth, an American by adoption, gave his services as speaker for the cause.

Charlie came to New York to conduct mammoth meetings. It was while he was engaged in this patriotic mission that he met again Marie Doro.

Those who know and who remember, say Charlie sat Marie down and asked permission just to gaze upon her beautiful countenance.

He refused to talk. He wanted only to look upon her beauty.

TALKED FROM SOUL

Charlie had ten minutes before train time. He was scheduled to appear in Washington for the drive. But he had met again his "beautiful princess" and he wouldn't leave.

Here was a love he wanted. Her beauty could inspire him.

Marie's voice delighted Chaplin.

And voices have always meant much to him. He would stand for hours, he once said, on New York streets, listening, just listening to the voices of Americans.

Marie's voice was "so musical" to Charlie. There was almost affection in her spoken sentiments. Marie seemed to talk from the soul.

And Charlie was a soul artist, a comic that injected into humor a bit of pathos.

Marie seemed to hypnotize the comedian.

And although there never was a physical demonstration of the true and profound affection he felt for her, Charlie never forgot Marie. He always kept her in his mind's eye.

He could fool with Alice, Jenny or Susie; he could hug and kiss Amy, Josie and Mary, but in his mind's eye—in the spiritual corner of his heart, he cherished the brief spiritual interlude he enjoyed with Marie.

Through her he came to know about a love that was fine and noble. He recognized a love of admiration and respect and awe.

Had their work brought them together instead of sending them into divergent directions, Charlie and Marie might have cemented a strong love.

The setting was there. The attraction was there. It needed a spark to set it off.

No other woman has ever haunted Charlie to such distraction. For no other woman has Charlie cared to miss trains.

Charlie was obliged to return to Hollywood. Marie continued with her stage work. The two drifted apart, although they never forgot their mutual admiration.

A love founded not on sex but on intellectual understanding and sympathy, it was destined to eternal friendship.

But back in the film colony, Chaplin was caught in the snarl of busy activity. He was carving his name in a new and different niche.

His presence was sought by those who would be smart and entertaining.

And then, one night, at a pretentious ball, Charlie met Edna Purviance—the girl who has influenced his life more than any other of his women.

PIONEER FILM PRODUCER FORMS NEW COMPANY

'Penthouse Murder' to Be First of Bachmann's Special Features

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Universal Service Motion Picture Editor
Copyright, 1931, by Universal Service, Inc.

Louella O. Parsons

Los Angeles, Aug. 5—No one versed in motion picture history can doubt that small individual producing companies are the trend of the times. Those who make a study of conditions prophesy the return of the unit production. David Selznick and Lewis Milestone saw it coming, and now J. G. Bachmann, pioneer producer, has stepped out and formed the Famous Attraction Company.

So sure is Jack Bachmann that he can sell his pictures that he has gone ahead making plans for six special features a year without any set release. His first picture is "Penthouse Murder" by Sam Spewack. Thornton Freeland, formerly one of United Artists' ace directors, has joined up with Bachmann and will direct.

This is the second time that Jack Bachmann has said he had great news. The other time was seven years ago when he signed Clara Bow and asked me to come to his office to meet the Brooklyn wonder. Perhaps he will again make a picture with Clara. She has stated she will not go on the stage until she has made a successful talkie.

Mr. Bachmann has been with Paramount as associate producer for three years. He and B. P. Schulberg have been together in various film enterprises, starting back in the days when they were doing business on a shoestring.

A telegram from Charlie Rogers says:

Charlie Rogers

"I know that you wouldn't do anything to harm the morale of my studio purposely but that paragraph in the Examiner stating that there would be some new faces at the RKO-Pathe studios after Hiram Brown arrived here is a false rumor. My studio is one of the most enthusiastic in California and therefore it hurts to have anything said to disturb that enthusiasm. Furthermore, for your information, my contract provides that I am in absolute charge of the studio, so no changes can be made without my definite approval."

I am sorry that I caused Charlie any annoyance for I wouldn't purposely do anything to upset him. He is an old friend and a good one, therefore I am happy to print his telegram. The rumor probably is false and serves me right for printing a rumor.

Seen and heard: Joseph Schenck is expected back in town next week. The Berlin trip, according to the last word from New York, has been postponed for a month or so. Nils Asther has just been signed on a new long term contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. He is up for a big part now. Chico Marx is leaving for New York this week to talk shop for himself and his brothers. The beach won't be the same without Chico, whose wisecracks have been broadcast throughout the length and breadth of the land. The Al Rocketts are sailing for Europe the last of the month. Al, who has been ill, has a three months' leave of absence. He will be back at his desk by October 19.

HOLDING THE SPOTLIGHT AT RKO BOSTON

With Dorothy Stone as headliner and "Hum and Strum," Boston favorites, also featured, the vaudeville program at RKO Boston this week is of the finest calibre. On the screen is Dorothy Mackaill in "The Reckless Hour."

Ex-Naval Ace Film Author

Frank Wilbur Wead, who wrote the story of "Dirigible," Columbia aviation picture, featured at RKO Keith's, beginning Friday, was the crack pilot of the naval air forces three years ago. He had established an enviable record as a flier, having twice captained victorious Navy teams in the annual Schneider Cup seaplane speed races and had successfully accomplished all the difficult feats known to stunt fliers. He had passed with signal honors, every course in aerial instruction given in Navy, Army and civilian flying schools.

There was not a stunt he had not dared and it was freely prophesied that he would die some day attempting a hazardous stunt. Daily he risked his life doing stunts and in the pursuit of his duties. And then in May, 1928, while in the safety zone of his own home and while doing so commonplace a thing as walking down stairs, he slipped and fell down five steps, injured his spine and was forced to retire from the service. He was transferred to the retired list with an elevation in rank from lieutenant to lieutenant-commander.

5000 Pictures of Clark Gable for State Fans

Beginning next Friday Loew's will give away 5000 autographed photos of Clark Gable to women and girls attending performances of "Sporting Blood," the special production booked in as the second of Loew's August Parade of Hits, at Loew's State.

Final Concert on Esplanade

Tonight brings the close of the third season of the Esplanade concerts. From every point of view, these concerts seem to have gained popularity far surpassing the two previous seasons.

The programs, excluding encores, have been made up of eight numbers each evening. Twenty-four concerts are the entire length of this year's season. This would make a possibility of 192 compositions to be played. Actually 156 different pieces of music were programmed, making a very formidable repertoire.

For the first time the general public has been invited to donate towards the expense of these concerts. The response has been fairly encouraging, but it is hoped by the sponsors for the purpose of assuring the continuance of these concerts for the future, that more donations will be forthcoming. Subscriptions may be sent to The Esplanade Concert Fund care of Lee Higginson Co., 70 Federal st.

CONGRESSMEN LAUD HEARST EDITORIAL

Men in public life in various parts of the Commonwealth continue to express themselves in commendatory terms about William Randolph Hearst's editorial calling for immediate action on the part of the President and Congress, as well as of the governors of states and mayors of cities where lawlessness is prevalent, to end the sway of the gang murderer and racketeer.

Congressmen express themselves as ready to support legislation necessary to co-operate with the states in driving the racketeer and the gangster from the country.

CONNERY FOR ACTION

Comments on Mr. Hearst's editorial follow:

CONGRESSMAN WILLIAM P. CONNERY, JR.—I think Mr. Hearst has added another notable example of his solicitude for the welfare and safety of his country and fellow countrymen, in his able editorial "What Are You Going to Do About It?" His suggestion that President Hoover and the governors get together in conference to discuss the subject, and that the co-operation of the federal government be given to stop the carnival of racketeering, gang murders and lawlessness rampant in portions of the country, is a splendid one. I think President Hoover should call a conference of the governors, sit down with them, ask them what help they desire and, having agreed on measures, ask Congress for legislation which will put an end to lawlessness in the land. I believe that much of the crime which is now prevalent is a result of the passage of the Eighteenth Amendment.

CITES CAPONE ACTION

CONGRESSMAN FREDERICK W. DALLINGER—The deplorable situation arising from the gang rule which now prevails in several of the largest cities of the country should be recognized by the people as the most important question of the day, and every possible means of combating it on the part of the municipal, state and federal governments must be brought into full play. The Constitution gives the federal government no police power. Its power is therefore, necessarily restricted to those means which it can legitimately use. That the federal government has already taken commendable steps can be seen in the case of the notorious Al Capone in Chicago, as well as in the increasing number of undesirable aliens who are being deported. Through prosecutions for fraudulent income tax returns and violations of the national liquor and narcotic laws and the deportation of undesirables, the federal government can be of untold help to the various states. If legislation is needed to make these methods more effective it will have my heartiest support at the next session of Congress which begins in December.

CONGRESSMAN CHARLES L. GIFFORD—There is not a proper demand on the part of the citizens of the country to have the laws enforced. Only by an aroused public opinion, strong enough so that Congressmen and Senators understand that they must do something because the people demand it, can anything be brought about. Congressmen and Senators are timid about taking the initiative on many things until aroused public opinion makes them do it.

German Banks, Shut Three Weeks, Reopen

Berlin, Aug. 5 (AP)—Germany's banks, closed for three weeks as an emergency during the most acute period of financial uncertainty, reopened today. Nowhere did there appear the excited crowds some had feared would be at the paying-tellers' windows.

The banks were well prepared for any eventuality, but the customers drew far less than had been anticipated. Many depositors who had previously notified the banks they intended to draw large sums cancelled their orders.

Gasoline Tank Blaze Imperils Firemen

Several firemen narrowly escaped burns today when the gasoline tank on a burning truck sent a flaming spray into the air at Station and Mindoro sts., Roxbury Crossing.

The truck, driven by Lionel Palmer of Western ave., Lynn, and owned by a downtown trucking concern, backfired and the blaze that followed reached the gasoline tank, splitting it by the heat and sending the spray into the air. The blaze was quickly subdued.

U. S. Steel Reduces Office Force Pay

New York, Aug. 5 (AP)—Reductions in salaries ranging from 10 to 15 per cent, effective Aug. 15, have been made by the United States Steel Corp. in the salaries of all office employes. The action carries out a recommendation made by the Board of Directors. Other employes were not affected by the reduction.

J. H. Sanderson Dies

Greenfield, Aug. 5 (AP)—John H. Sanderson, 90, died today after a long illness. He formerly was president of both the Warner Manufacturing Co. and the Franklin County Trust Co.

"One-man" fire departments are quite the thing in Duesseldorf, Germany. Small, well equipped fire wagons each operated by one man, speed at 80 miles an hour to the rural and suburban districts. Read about this in the American Weekly in the next Boston Sunday Advertiser.

ALL FISHERMEN DON'T LIE

We've all heard about the "whoppers" that got away, but here's Mr. and Mrs. Harry Fossa of Danvers with the proof—a 62-pound cod caught off York Beach, Me. The fish is the largest cod landed there in 45 years. It is now providing fish dinners for several families. (Staff photo.)

Police Cycle Hits Woman

Mrs. Emma Olsen, 75, of 156 Spencer ave., Chelsea, was injured on Broadway, Chelsea, yesterday, when struck by a motorcycle operated by Patrolman John C. Pike.

$75,000 Fire on Farm

Plymouth, N. H., Aug. 5—Fire destroyed a house, barn, farming and dairy equipment at the Tobey farm. Damage was estimated at $75,000.

SHAW MAY BE A LIAR TO SOVIET

London, Aug. 5 (AP)—If Russia's Communists could hear him talk about them, said George Bernard Shaw today, they would call him one of the most monstrous paradoxes, if not the greatest liar on the face of the earth.

He was talking at the Independent Labor party summer school about his recent brief visit to Soviet Russia with Lady Astor and several British tourists.

"The Communist system," said he, "is an intensely religious system. They are working out the Fabian Socialism which the Fabian Society in Great Britain has been advocating for a quarter of a century, but the Russians would laugh if you told them that."

Nevertheless, he declared, the five year plan is working smoothly, and it is the hope of the world. Great Britain and the United States, he asserted, are badly in need of such a plan, for with the one on which they operate now, they are "running to the edge of the abyss."

INA CLAIRE IS 'TOO SMART'

Los Angeles, Aug. 5 (AP)—The airplane elopement of Ina Claire, stage and screen actress, and John Gilbert, romantic movie actor, whose marriage was termed the "ideal romance," has crashed in the divorce courts.

The actress obtained the decree on a charge of mental cruelty, saying Gilbert told her they were temperamentally unsuited to each other and that he wanted to be left alone.

A large crowd attended the hearing. Gilbert was not present.

"I tried to get John to come back," Miss Claire testified. "But he said I was a woman with too much intellect—whatever he meant by that."

Gilbert said later that no property settlement, in the usual sense of the term, had been agreed on.

"She has been more than fair in every way," Gilbert said. "She voluntarily signed away, one year after our marriage, all rights to my property."

The divorce ended the third marriage of Gilbert, and the second of the actress.

Two Hurt as Snake Takes Joy Ride in Speeding Auto

Bloomsburg, Pa., Aug. 5 (INS)—The latest entry for the "best snake story of 1931" was revealed today.

Eugene Hernie crouched contentedly behind the wheel of his speeding automobile. In the rear seat were his brother William and Theodore Diettrick.

Suddenly a five-foot black snake uncurled from under the rear seat, slithered across the floor and up over the front seat. It looped itself over Eugene's shoulders. Eugene let out a loud yell, let go of the wheel and the car crashed into a pole. William and Theodore were injured.

The snake escaped unharmed.

Newton Contract Let

The contract for building the new City Hall and war memorial in Newton was awarded today by Mayor Sinclair Weeks to C. S. Cunningham & Sons Co. of Boston, whose bid of $494,100 was the lowest. Sub-contracts also awarded to lowest bidders.

GERMAN BUDGET 'CUT TO BONE'

Berlin, Aug. 5 (AP)—Vice-Chancellor Hermann Dietrich, who also is finance minister, asserted today that every criticism of extravagance in the German federal budget made by S. Parker Gilbert while he was agent general for reparations payments has been met in the budget for 1931.

"We have cut to the bone," said Dr. Dietrich, "and now we can say that the 1931 budget really is one of drastic economy.

"The 1930 budget, put into effect by emergency decree, provided for expenditures of $3,019,750,000; that for 1931, as passed by the Reichstag and pruned by the government, calls for $385,500,000 less, or a total of $2,634,250,000.

"This does not yet include savings made possible by the Hoover holiday, and it all shows how carefully we have gone about cutting expenses."

Woman Drowns as Rowboat Capsizes

Sebasco, Me., Aug. 5 (AP)—Mrs. Mary B. Norton, 40, of Bath, drowned last night when a rowboat in which she and two other persons were riding tipped over 200 feet from the eastern shore of Casco Bay.

Jerry and Etta Bartlett, brother and sister, of Sebasco, the other occupants, made their way to a reef and were rescued. Mrs. Norton's body was recovered.

IS N. Y. INDIGNANT OVER GANG MURDER?

—By Gilbert Seldes—

GILBERT SELDES

MOST OF THE NEWSPAPERS of New York, during the past few days, have referred to "public indignation" and an aroused sense of public outrage, as the result of the shooting of several Italian children in the course of a racketeers' feud. I hope the papers are right, they are certainly right in attempting to create the kind of savage and noble indignation which they say already exists, for this slaughter of the innocents is exactly the sort of thing which can pull up the average indifferent citizen and make him say "this is going too far."

Comforting Words

But I am not at all sure that the public, the three or four million, can be brought to the point of action. We have word-formulas for putting such things out of our minds; awful, ghastly, incredible. The only formula the New Yorker can no longer use is, "Do they think this is Chicago?" because this latest murder is more callous, if it isn't more horrible, than the garage murder of gangsters which up to now has been the most beastly of its kind. On the conscience of the city authorities, the murder ought to be a burden, although the police are not the cause of racketeering, we pass on to them the job of protecting us from it and punishing its more vicious forms. I do not envy the police at this moment, and I confess that the story of Little Italy refusing to talk seemed to me puerile and ridiculous.

No public meeting of angry citizens has yet been announced; no vigilantes have gathered together; and the average tippling citizen is still [illegible]g booze, perhaps paying his share of tribute [illegible] murderers.

X Marks the Spot

[illegible] a book on palmistry soon to be issued, I find a peculiar note on "the spot." It appears [illegible] a dent or hole in any line" of the palm and [illegible] ates the temporary cessation of the ac[illegible] of that line at that particular moment . . . [illegible] the Line of Life it is the indication of a sudden sharp attack of illness. On the Line of Head it usually foretells a severe blow or concussion of the brain."

Perhaps critics, a thousand years from now, will trace back to this book the origin of the phrase, "p[illegible] on the spot." The sudden, sharp atta[illegible]ness would be "lead poisoning" or "swallowing some lead" and the only thing the critic of the future will not understand is why this "cessation of activities" should be called temporary. Our gunmen, when they are at the top of their form, take no chances on recovery.

Capitalism and Summer Heat

Some of my friends, convinced that I am "a liberal at heart" or "an unconscious radical" ("unconscious" is good, at any rate) are irritated by my failure to snap back at the capitalist system. They find unsatisfactory my suspicion that nothing preceding the capitalist system was much better, and my lack of faith in what will come after capitalism simply shocks [illegible].

To please them I am going to accuse the capitalist system of a grave crime against humanity—the gravest, in fact. It is that capitalism has done nothing about the weather in a big way. It has sold heating devices and created air-conditioning and refrigerating plants; but these mitigate the offense which is, according to the bill of complaint, "compelling people to live and work in unsuitable climates, and at unsuitable times."

A Cool Complaint

This is not the derangement of a heat victim. I am fairly calm, fairly cool, and entirely serious when I say that the aim of a well-regulated society should be the well-being, the satisfaction of its citizens; and there can be no well-being until the physical conditions of life are made appropriate to the human beings who have the job of living. The whole trouble with savagery, which always appears to be such an ideal state, is that the savage suffers from real and imaginary terrors, from lightning and the wrath of Moo-Moo, the great god, from drougth and famine.

The civilized man, roughly speaking, does not thirst; he still passes through periods when he hasn't enough to eat. He does not freeze (except in England, where he prefers to), but he suffers ignominiously from heat. He betrays himself by believing that he lives in a temperate climate and, because he hasn't made the arrangements and adjustments which people in the tropics do make, he suffers tropical damnation.

The capitalist system has arranged for a number of people, an extremely small number, to escape some of the miseries of heat; to the rest, to executives earning a hundred thousand a year (and getting bonuses of half a million) it offers ice water, a fan, an office on the 80th floor and other conveniences; but it keeps him at work. Go down the salary ranges, and the number of comforts decreases; at the bottom they do not exist.

44 Weeks Per Years

Yet the release from labor in factories and offices during the summer months would cost less than most of the experiments of our system of living. What is wrong with the method followed by a friend of mine who draws salary 12 months a year, but works only 10? I should say it is ideal. Granted that a specific quantity of work must be done, isn't it possible to get it done in 44 weeks, leaving eight of leisure, during which a proportionate amount of salary is paid? It is merely a question of pushing back the sacred number of working weeks, already 50 weeks constitutes a working year, with salary for 52; for many people, 48 weeks constitute par. And if people really cared more for lying beside a silver lake for two months than having pearl-handled chewing-gum service-plates they could make 44 the standard.

He—"Hey, get a cop!"
She—"Is this a personal or a business call?"

Words-Music

—By Deems Taylor—

GOETHE MIGHT have had our present plight in mind when he wrote The Sorcerer's Apprentice. That young man, you may remember, having watched his master at work, and having picked up one or two of the simpler incantations took advantage of the old gentleman's absence one afternoon to try a bit of magic on his own account.

"Fetch water," he said to the broom, accompanying the order with the appropriate magic phrase. Whereupon the broom obligingly left its favorite corner, picked up a couple of pails, and started drawing and pouring water.

It—or shall we say he?—filled the drinking pail; he filled the cistern; he filled the tubs—the small washtub in the kitchen, and the big one upstairs for bathing, he filled the pots, and the pans, and the kettles, he filled the big cauldron that was used for stewing death potions and immunity baths, and the little ones for brewing love philtres; and when everything in the house that could possibly hold liquid was full and brimming over, he kept right on drawing and fetching water, and emptying it nowhere, until the floors and the walls were dripping, the cellar awash, and the ground floor rooms full.

Meanwhile, the terrified and half-drowned apprentice was trying frantically to remember the particular magic words that would induce that damned broom to stop. If the magician hadn't happened to come back early, just in time to utter the mot juste, there is no telling what might have happened.

* * *

It begins to look as if we were going to find out, with disconcerting particularity, just what would have happened. About 1785, the year that James Watts' double-action engine was set to work running an English cotton mill, we said to machinery, in effect, "draw water; turn wheels; spin; weave; sew cloth, cut wood, carve stone, fashion metal." We began to replace the labor of hands with the labor of mechanical devices that worked faster and more accurately, and at lower wages.

If the world had not gone on its late four-year spree, during which it took 65,000,000 men out of their jobs and supported them at the public expense, killed 8,000,000 of them and spent about $50,000,000,000 destroying another $50,000,000,000 worth of property and land values—if we hadn't given that particularly party, we might still be happily watching our enchanted broom drawing water.

But bills have an unfortunate habit of coming due; and just now we are starting to pay for the war, and are a bit hard up. Whereupon we make the unhappy discovery that having started our machines, and kept them running for upwards of a century and a half, we don't know how to stop them.

If an automobile manufacturer were to launch an advertising campaign announcing that, "Inasmuch as we have been obliged to decrease our output, owing to the present business depression, the price of the Runaway Straight Eight has been advanced 20 per cent"—we should call him a lunatic. Yet that is, logically, just what he should do. Our whole industrial structure is buttressed on one side by tremendous output, resulting in low manufacturing costs, and on the other by tremendous sales, the result of low prices. When something goes wrong to disturb this equilibrium; when sales fall off and output shrinks; the structure does not shrink correspondingly. It simply falls to pieces.

A Number of Things

—By Charles Hanson Towne—

Charles H. Towne

ONE approaches Miss Willa Cather's new novel, "Shadows on the Rock," issued today by Alfred A. Knopf, with a certain reticence and reverence; reticence because one realizes how impossible it is to give, in a brief review any comprehension of how truly great this book is, reverence because one must come to it almost as one would go to one of those old French-Canadian shrines of which she writes with such dignity and beauty.

And how nobly she builds her story! And at what pains she has been to study the period of which she writes, catching and pouring into her romance the very essence of those vanished days in old Quebec which she makes us see with her seeing eyes. Here is the stuff of which great literature is made. It has the lines of one of the Elgin marbles; it has the grace and nobility of a Greek statue.

* * *

There are long passages in this tale which are as fine, I think, as anything Miss Cather has ever done—finer, indeed. She sweeps us back to the year 1697, and two decades beyond that, to the philosopher apothecary's shop which then stood on one of those granite cliffs overlooking the ancient town of Quebec; and she gives us a picture of this wise little fellow, Euclide Auclair, and the life he led, in simplicity and peace, with his younger daughter, Cecile. A widower, this child kept house for him.

The great Governor of the Province, Count Frontenac, was his patron and friend, and to his dingy door came all the great personages of the small city—Bishops as well as the bourgeoisie of the day; and because the old Mother Superior of the convent on the hill was too weak to come to him, he went to her with his remedies.

* * *

Some contagion of the goodness of the pious nuns of that era in that town must have penetrated into the humblest homes along those rocky defiles; for here we see the little Cecile constantly ministering to those less fortunate than herself; tidying up a tiny boy who lived with a dingy and dissolute mother in another section of the town; seeing that he had socks and shoes against those wintry winds that beat down upon them all.

We see her lighting candles in the dim cathedral to please the wretched lad, though she had not 20 sous with which to pay for them; and we get glimpses of old legends, we have fleeting pictures of the valiant fur traders who threaded the wastelands; of priests and nuns who gave up the world to save the souls of the dreary inhabitants; and we have starry visions of Christmas nights on these snowy summits, when the heavens leaned down and seemed to kiss the bleak hills.

We see an old Bishop arising at four in the morning to ring his bell for mass, and the folk murmuring in their bed, but arising to obey the summoning voice, because the Bishop was stronger than they.

Before her death, Madame Auclair had said to the little Cecile: "Without order our lives would be disgusting, like those of the poor savages. At home, in France, we have learned to do all these things in the best way, and we are called the most civilized people in Europe and other nations envy us."

* * *

This passion for clean and righteous living got into the very fibre of the child; and "the sense of 'our way'—that is what she (the mother) longed to leave with her daughter.

The ships went out from this lonely port not to return for months. The people settled down to their exile, shut off from the Old World, and when the vessels proudly returned to their harbor there were days full of gala excitement, when sailors filled the streets and letters came from France, and the apothecary had a new supply of his herbs and simples.

In the end, we see the old Count dying, he who had longed so passionately for death on his native shores. But that was not to be. Too forthright, he had incurred the displeasure of his King. But if his body could not rest in France, he knew that if his friend, the apothecary, should cut out his heart, that, at any rate, could find a resting place in the Old World.

And the younger Bishop, who had despised his older predecessor, finally comes, we see, to a knowledge of the greatness of humility, and he returns, a broken man, to this small province to take up the threads of his own and the other's work.

Willa Cather has written another masterpiece, and unless I am no prophet at all, she will achieve another Pulitzer prize.

Man About Town

GOLF

He's one of our better known golfers, in fact he ranks among the first 10 club-swingers in the country . . . He was a guest at a house party down on the Cape over the week-end and he was quite the lion of the party . . . Late in the evening, after Our Hero had done plenty of elbow bending and was feeling rather high, one of the girls began to give him the hero stuff and tell him how much she admired him . . .

"Do you play golf?" Our Hero asked.

"No," she replied, "but I'd love to have you teach me."

"No sooner said than done," sez he.

And he went out into the hall and [illegible] a few minutes later with a [illegible] and a golf ba[illegible].

"Come on," he said.

VIRTUES REWARD

It happened Friday night at the Roxbury Old Home Week Celebration . . . Mr. and Mrs. Bob Alexander had gone there to donate their services, free, to the evening's entertainment program . . . They arrived and found the crowd so large and unmanageable that they were unable to break through and do their act . . . So, after several vain attemptts, they gave up and started back to their car to go home.

Just before they came to the car Bob saw a dark object on the ground . . . He picked it up . . . It was a pocketbook with $19, several checks and an identification card giving a name and address in Falmouth. The Alexanders got in their car, drove home and called up the party in Falmouth . . . They explained that they had found the pocketbook and the owner was delighted with the news . . .

"Could you bring it down here and return it to me?" they asked. "I haven't any car available or I would drive up to Boston and get it myself."

So the obliging Mr. Alexander piled into his car Saturday, drove the 70 or 80 miles to Falmouth, hunted up the owner of the pocketbook and returned it, intact.

And all that he got for his trouble was "Thank you." It was a great day for a ride anyway, Bob says, and the gentleman's "Thank you" was most cordial.

SIGHTS AND SOUNDS

Charlie Phelan has bought a new race horse—a 3-year-old . . . And speaking of race horses did you know that a group of politicians have been working for some weeks now on [illegible] laying the foundation for the introduction of a bill at the next session of the Legislature legalizing pari-mutuels in Massachusetts? . . . If it goes through you'd probably see a lot of activity out around Readville . . . Ruth Cambridge, Winchell's secretary (and, by the way, she DOESN'T write that "secretary" column of his) was in the chorus of "The Silver Swan" when it played here a couple of seasons ago . . . While we're talking about Winchell, we might as well tell you that we stole a page from his book ("What, another?") and discovered that there are nine Virgins in Greater Boston . . . If you don't believe it take a look in the phone book yourself . . . Marie ("Mother Goose") Mason has recovered sufficiently to broadcast for an hour or so each day and before long she'll be back on the job at WLOE as Mother Goose . . . One of our spies has reported that our old friend, Ollie Garrett, is spending a nice summer on Deer Island assigned to the barn on the island, acting as valet to the cows . . .

U.S. EXPORTS TO RUSSIA GAIN; OTHERS DROP

Washington, Aug. 5 (AP)—While American trade with virtually all other regions of the world was declining during June, exports to Russia doubled those of the preceding month.

The commerce department's analysis of foreign trade for the month of June showed that Russia bought $12,618,056 as compared to $5,361,879 in May and [illegible] in June 1930.

There was little change in American purchases from Russia. Imports from that country during June were $1,[illegible]. In May they were $1,4[illegible] and in June 1930 $2,778,238.

The grand total of American [illegible] in June [illegible] compared [illegible] for the same month of last year. Imports were $173,[illegible] for June this year and $[illegible]342,7[illegible] a year ago.

RAIL RATE PLAN HITS SHIPPERS

Portland, Me., Aug. 5 (AP)—Robert P. Hazzard, shoe manufacturer, at a sectional hearing on the proposed 15 per cent increase in railroad freight rates today charged the carriers with attempting to place upon shippers [illegible] burdens caused by their own inefficiency.

Commissioner Claude R. Porter of the Interstate Commerce Commission, which has before it the petition of the railroads for such an increase, presided at the hearing, which opened yesterday.

"They have not met competition," Hazzard said, "and when in industry we fail to do this we have to pay the penalty and not have some Government department pass this inefficiency on to someone else, especially one who still remains a customer."

Hazzard said he believed the increase would drive more business away from the roads and questioned placing railroad workers [illegible] a preferred class when wages have to be reduced."

Trackage Leases Are Sought by 2 Roads

Washington, Aug. 5 (AP)—The Boston & Maine and the Central Vermont Railroads asked the Interstate Commerce Commission today for permission to [illegible] to effect 30-year leases for certain sections of two roads.

The Boston & Maine would lease trackage rights over 14 miles of the Central Vermont between White River Junction and Windsor, Vt. The Central Vermont would lease similar rights over 49 miles of the Boston & Maine, between Windsor and Brattleboro.

TRUMBULL KIN IN COURT FIGHT

Bridgeport, Ct., Aug. 5 (INS)—Members of the family of former Gov. John H. Trumbull went to court today over the matter of holdings in the now struggling Connecticut Electric Mfg. Co., once one of the great industries here.

Mrs. Bertha Trumbull Miner, of Newburn, N. C., and Mrs. Priscilla Trumbull Gill, of Bridgeport, brought suit against Alexander H. Trumbull for $50,000.

The two women once possessed 1803 shares of stock in the electric company. In 1926 they sold the stock to Alexander H. Trumbull, brother of the former governor, for $1,46[illegible]. They claim $27,000 with interest is still due.

The electric company now is in receivership.

MEMORY FAILS DIAMOND'S AID

New York, Aug. 5 (INS)—The first of the government's witnesses against Jack (Legs) Diamond suddenly lost his memory today when called to the stand in the federal court.

So much did he forget that Asst. U. S. Atty. Arthur Schwartz asked permission of the court to examine him on the supposedly clear and definite testimony he had given before the grand jury which indicted Diamond and Paul Quattrocchi, his aide.

Angelo Benedetto, the witness, did say that he, Diamond and Quattrocchi decided "to start a little beer business" last summer and even named several of his customers.

But when asked just what part Diamond had played in starting "the little beer business," he couldn't remember.

What Price Cupid? London Presents Marital Puzzle

London, Aug. 5 (INS)—Continuing a study of matrimonial preferences begun a few years ago by Anita Loos, the London County Council announces three brand new puzzling discoveries.

Widows prefer bachelors;
Bachelors prefer spinsters;
Spinsters prefer widowers.

It would seem to be an endless chain, but the council assures that these laws are based on actual marriage records. The key to the puzzle appears to lie in the fact that there are more women seeking mates than men.

Bachelors should beware of widows between the ages of 35 and 45, the council warns, because that is their "dangerous age"—the period during which most of them remarry.

$50,000 BLAZE IN MAINE TOWN

Yarmouth, Me., Aug. 5 (AP)—Fire, believed to have started from a torch being used by workmen in dismantling machinery, last night and early today destroyed unused wooden buildings at the abandoned pulp plant of the S. D. Warren Co. with a replacement value of $50,000.

The burned buildings covered approximately two acres of the 10-acre group.

The flames could be seen as far as Brunswick—14 miles to the east.

Aid was called from Freeport, Cumberland, Falmouth, Foreside and Portland for the two-hour fight to keep the fire from spreading to adjoining property.

CHICAGO'S REDS ARE WARNED

Chicago, Aug. 5 (INS)—Hundreds of police patrolled the streets of the "Black Belt" today, alert for any signs of disorder which might develop into a riot similar to that of Monday, in which three Negroes were slain.

Commissioner John Alcock notified Communist agitators that if they incited fruther riots all leaders of the party would be jailed. Monday's riot started over an attempt of a bailiff to evict a penniless woman.

Numerous meetings were held to consider the tense situation and social workers agreed that eviction orders should be held up until each case could be investigated.

The 21 prisoners taken at the scene of the outbreak will be prosecuted on charges of inciting a riot and for contempt of court in resisting court order for eviction.

LABOR CONVENTION MUST FACE PERIL THAT LIES IN 21-HOUR WEEK

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

ROBERT E ROGERS

THE 46TH CONVENTION of the Massachusetts State Federation of Labor is meeting in New Bedford this week. Like most conventions, its program is probably already carefully arranged, every hour taken up. It will be interesting to watch, however, whether the convention will be able to find any time for discussion of certain things which bulk large in the public mind at present.

Nothing lately has done so much to give organized labor a black eye in the view of the business and professional world as the recent exhibition of inter-union jealousy and legal mindedness which held up the work on the Boston postoffice for nearly a week. It was noticeable that the press, which is usually very chary of expressing an opinion on union matters, was sufficiently roused to voice, almost in unison, its disgust at the tactics which involved no principle, but which seemed to be the result of inter-union politics pure and simple. This squabble over a "caste system," which seems almost as destructive of enterprise and progress as the Hindu caste system, cost time and money with no discernible good results to anybody, least of all to the unions themselves. It will be interesting to see whether the state organization is interested and powerful enough to take the matter in hand and whether it is civic-minded enough to take steps to prevent a repetition of such occurrences

* * *

At Peak During War

Organized labor is in a position of peculiar difficulty these days. For more than a hundred years the principle upon which it has worked has, without question, been the chief, almost the sole, instrument by which labor has reached its preferred position in the state today. It has gained this position of security against powerful odds, against the strength of organized capital, against political inertia, against the old-time American preference for individualism and go-as-you-please.

During the war, under President Wilson's administration, the A. F. of L. reached what has since proved to be the height of its power. The Adamson bill is the monument to its triumph. It virtually controlled the terms by which labor was employed during the war. Without organized political action, in the sense in which European labor understands the term, it consolidated for itself a position more favorable than that of labor anywhere else in the world. This position it has gained for itself against powerful political and business opposition.

Now labor finds itself in a position where the old economic laws seem to be crumbling. Politicians and financiers, business men, economists everywhere are admitting that we are on the edge of a new era, in which the old methods may not work. The industrial statesmanship of the future will be a far different statesmanship than that of the past.

* * *

Surplus of Labor Now

It will be interesting to see whether Labor will be able to meet this challenge of change, or whether it will go on repeating the old 19th century shibboleths, the slogans with which it won its earlier battles. For it is fighting today under different conditions.

Once there was more work than even the workers, constantly augmented by large immigration, could take care of. Now, in spite of the cutting off of immigration, it is becoming apparent that machinery is so cutting down the number of men who used to be needed on many operations that we may face a surplus of labor.

It seems plain, furthermore, according to our most thoughtful experts, that price and wage standards of the past 10 years will have to come down. Prices are falling. Salaries are falling. Wages of unorganized labor, unskilled labor, office work and the like are falling. Organized labor from the beginning, however, has made it plain that it will not accept wage cuts. It has served notice that it, alone, will not bear the brunt of the depression.

This is the old statesmanship which was successful on the whole in the past. Will it continue to be successful in the future? Or will organized labor find that, owing to conditions that nobody can control, the basis of its power has slid out from under, leaving it at a disadvantage in a new era?

The convention in New Bedford is talking about unemployment insurance. Under the new conditions that will probably come, un-American as it sounds to the older generation. The rest of the world has it. The United States will have to fall in step.

21-Hour Week Talk

The national secretary, speaking last week at Niagara Falls, predicted the 21-hour week as the solution, a little over four hours a day for a five-day week. Ten years ago, when people were tentatively talking about a five-day week and a six-hour day, that would have seemed too preposterous to discuss. Today it is not too preposterous.

One cannot, however, fail to see the dangers involved in that proposal. There is little doubt that industry, properly organized, could take care of our consumption needs on such a labor basis. Economically, it may even be a desirable solution.

From another, more fundamentally human, point of view, I have my doubts. Frank Morrison, in his speech at Niagara Falls, is quoted as saying, "The reduced working week would give workers the opportunity for spiritual and mental development to which they are entitled."

There's the rub! How many of our wage-earners will take advantage of a four-hour day to improve themselves spiritually and mentally? Not one in a hundred. That is my belief. The four-hour day, however desirable economically, might very well be the ruin of the majority of our workers. More time for baseball games and the talkies; more time for aimless automobile driving; more time for idleness and slackness. Satan finds mischief for idle hands to do.

The average unorganized business and professional man works harder, longer, more continuously and with more concentration than the average wage-earning workingman, organized or unorganized. He gives you on the whole more for your money's worth. That is why such talk as that of Mr. Morrison makes the average business and professional man very, very tired. The habit of working is infinitely more important to any man than a leisure which he has not earned. It is not good for any man to get into soft and idle habits, such as the four-hour day would inevitably bring.

WAR 'BUDDIES' FIGHT VET'S DEPORTATION

WRIT SOUGHT IN U. S. COURT TO BLOCK MOVE

Gen. Cole and Lieut.-Col. Blake Aid the Cause of Amadeo Alcorace, an Alien

The first gun in the fight by wartime "buddies" to block deportation of Amadeo Alcorace, 31, of Waterbury, Ct., as an undesirable alien, was fired today in federal court when a petition for a writ of habeas corpus was filed by Atty. Walter E. Brownell.

Through the petition, Alcorace's release is sought pending a hearing on the deportation warrant. No date for a hearing on the petition has been set.

YD veterans have taken up the battle of Alcorace, who served in the 103d Machine Gun Battalion and was severely wounded in action.

COL. BLAKE HELPS

Lieut.-Col. William J. Blake, president of the YD Club of Boston, was to confer with Gen. Charles L. Cole, president of the YD Veterans' Association, and will recommend an investigation.

Alcorace has been at the East Boston station since February. He was seized by immigration officials on his release from the Connecticut State prison and has been held here since while the government conducted its investigation into his case.

The federal probe is completed and the government warrant ordering his deportation to Italy, is in the hands of Mrs. Anna C. M. Tillinghast, immigration commissioner.

STIRRED TO ACTION

Coming on the eve of his deportation, the news spurred YD members to great activity to stay the proceedings while they prepared plans for the fight to keep him in the country.

The petition points out that Alcorace was brought to the United States from Italy when he was three-months old and the bad habits acquired were American habits. The deportation law was enacted to rid the country of alien criminals who acquired their vicious habits in their native land, the petition avers.

It is also pointed out that Alcorace, living here since the age of three moths, is virtually a product of America and would be a practical exile in Italy. He speaks only English.

YOUTH SPEEDS TO CLASS; FINED

Hadley Case of Yellow Springs, Ohio, attended "school" in Malden late yesterday instead of at Boston University. Motorcycle Officer Henry Savage trailed a rapidly moving car through the business section of Everett and thence over the Revere Beach parkway into Medford hitting 53 miles an hour as it wove its way through traffic. After a three-mile chase he overhauled the machine.

"Where do you think you are going at that speed?" he asked Case.

"I'll be late for school at Boston University," Case replied.

"You come along to school with me at Malden this time," the motorcycle officer ordered.

Case was fined $15 in Malden District Court.

GOV. ELY'S AID RACES DEATH

Anxious over news of the sudden illness of his mother, 500 miles away in Ontario, Capt. Terrell M. Ragan, president of the Continental Boston National Bank, and military aide to Governor Ely, chartered a fast airplane at the Boston Airport to speed with a doctor to his mother's bedside.

Ragan, accompanied by Dr. Orel F. Martin of Jamaica Plain, left the airport at noon yesterday expecting to clear the customs and immigration inspectors at Buffalo and to land at their destination, London, Ontario, by 5:30.

Charles E. Loring Jr., a pilot for the P. W. L. Flying Service, flew the pair in a speedy Stinson cabin monoplane.

Ragan's brother, Joseph, said last night at the banker's home on West Roxbury Parkway, Brookline, that news of his mother's sudden illness came yesterday by wire.

Joseph came to Boston last week with his mother from their home in Atlanta, Ga., for a visit, and she then continued to Ontario to visit Mrs. Ragan, wife of the banker.

LOST ICE CREAM PROBE ASKED

City Councillor Francis E. Kelly of Dorchester today demanded an explanation of the disposition of $160 worth of ice cream which Mayor Curley yesterday stated was paid for and sent to the children of Ward 15.

Kelly asserted the ice cream was never delivered and said he would demand an investigation by the finance commission if necessary.

The row over the ice cream resulted from Mayor Curley's refusal to approve payment of [illegible] for cream distributed to Ward 15 children on July 4 on the grounds that Kelly had contracted with a Quincy firm to furnish the cream without authority.

The mayor, in a long communication to the City Council, insisted the city could not be held liable for the bill. Only July 13 the council passed an order that the city pay the disputed amount.

MY ROMANCE

Rudy Describes the Super-Perfect Day in His Romance

CHAPTER X.

Divorce seems to be a troublesome and tragic feature of so-called modern marriage. But I believe many divorces are avoidable; and the time to begin avoiding them is during courtship.

It might seem strange to some of my readers that I should be discussing the question of divorce at this time; but, since Fay and I have been married, my ideas on the subject have been asked frequently.

(Although Rudy Vallee has just been married, he knows the dangers that all marriages face. In this series of articles he is describing his romance in his own words. Today he tells how, in courtship, he and his wife sought to assure a lasting love.—Editor.)

I don't know why such questions should be asked me, for I certainly do not pose as an authority on such matters. But if there are those who want to know my opinions, I don't mind expressing them.

Divorce is tragic even when the victims part good friends, for divorce represents the ashes of a burned-out love with not even a spark left of the original bright flame. Love grown cold is a bitter morsel.

SYMBOL OF DEAD LOVE

And too often, divorce signifies not only the neutrality of a chilled love, but even active hate. When love dies between a man and a woman, its place may be taken by bitterness.

Divorce is a catastrophe since it represents a wrecked love. But divorce at best is a negative proposition. It is not a cure for unhappy marriage; it is merely the tombstone of a dead love, a symbol of failure.

But separation at least, if not divorce, is better than living together in an inferno of hate, vilification and contempt. Assuredly such a state of affairs is contrary to nature and only dire evil can follow.

So, the time to begin trying to avoid divorce is not when love begins to cool, but when it is at the height of its ardor.

If one waits until there is danger of divorce, then it is too late. In my opinion one should begin trying to avoid divorce at the very moment of the marriage ceremony or even during the courtship.

Fay and I began assuring our lasting love during our courtship. The first step was in assuring ourselves that we were really in love. That is not always easy to know. Men and women may be strongly attracted to each other, and sometimes they mistake this magnetism for love. Sometimes it is and sometimes it isn't.

NEED CONFIDENCE

Attraction I believe can become real and certain love only through long acquaintance. How otherwise can two people be sure that their temperaments and tastes are fitted to each other? How otherwise can they be sure that they will be companionable? And if they are not COMPANIONABLE, how can they expect their marriage to last?

I have known Fay for a little less than two years. During that time we have been a great deal together both on the Pacific Coast and in New York. We did not enter into marriage until we were fully confident that our love and companionship would be lasting.

Our courtship included some circumstances which would be inclined to strain any relation short of real love. During the two weeks when I first knew her in Hollywood I was extremely busy with work on my picture. Then two months later, she came on to New York, where I was even busier still with broadcasting, phonograph recording and night club work. Usually I was a bit hurried, sometimes anxious about my next appointment and often a little weary. Such circumstances are not ordinarily conducive to love. The development of love usually requires a certain calmness of mind and a certain physical leisure. But even under these difficult conditions our affection grew. I found Fay always patient and agreeable.

FAY NEVER CROSS

On several occasions I made appointments with her which it was inconvenient to keep, at best, keeping them would have entailed considerable business sacrifices. But she was never cross.

Once I received word from an important radio sponsor that he had to see me immediately regarding some important details of a contract. I had an appointment with Fay and I could not communicate with her in time to say I would not be there.

When I did see her I approached rather sheepishly, for I myself am very strict about appointments, and do not like to have them broken when I am the victim. But Fay greeted me with a smile.

I apologized most profusely, but she continued to smile pleasantly. I explained that I could have kept our appointment, but it would have been at the sacrifice of an important business deal. Then she said:

"But you mustn't feel badly about it. I knew when you didn't appear there must have been a very good reason. And I certainly wouldn't have you make any sacrifices just to keep an appointment. Your time is valuable. Mine isn't. I'll always be waiting. It is my business to help, not hinder you."

I have known a few girls who considered themselves so high and mighty that they would accept no reason for a delayed or broken appointment, although they reserved to themselves the right to break an appointment for any excuse they thought sufficient.

So, naturally, I was impressed with Fay's wholehearted attitude, and took it as an indication of her character. I was right. So, I began to appreciate not only her love but her friendly attitude, which is a powerful support for love.

I have seen couples who were strongly attracted to each other, but who were not really companionable friends. So I was happy to find that Fay fulfilled my ideas of friendship as well as love.

That, to my mind, is the first step toward lasting marriage—the determination by a man or a woman that his or her future partner has those traits which make for a FRIENDLY relationship. That means long acquaintance.

And that is why I ventured the opinion in the beginning of this chapter that a couple should begin trying to avoid divorce even in their courtship—by being confident that they are well suited for each other.

I hope my theory is correct, and that Fay and I have assured ourselves of lasting love—but, after all, human hearts are unfathomably mysterious.

DAILY TRUE STORY

NO MAN'S CHOICE

"MAKES ME LONESOME FOR OLD POND AT HOME"

'FROGS' That's all it is. Just a bunch of bullfrogs!'

I laughed in sheer relief at Harvey Hawkins' casual explanation. We had been standing on the firestep when the harsh croaking sound first reached us from the ghostly terrain out in front of the trench.

"Bullfrogs! Heck!" he murmured softly, staring out over the parapet into the black night. 'Makes me lonesome for the old pond out back of the farm.'

"Uh-huh! You'll be lonesome a long time before you get out of this man's army!'

The night we took over a front line trench in the Argonne sector, south of Seicheprey, the first thing he asked was:

"Where's this war I've been hearing so much about?"

"You'll find out plenty soon enough," I told him. "Just stick around a while and Fritz will soon wise you up!"

"Huh! That's what they said back in——"

Which was as far as he got. A five-nine slammed down in front of the trench, showering the parapet with dirt and stones.

The kid had stood the ordeal as well as might be expected. But it was going to be slow work I realized initiating him into trench life. He could handle a gun of course but he was woefully green with the bayonet. And he never would learn to duck down when walking along the trench past places where the parapet had been shot away.

Listening now to the chanting chorus of the bullfrogs I sensed an instinctive change in Harvey. At the same time I figured he'd been so busy mooning about the old farm back home that a raiding party could walk right into the trench before he would notice them.

"Wanta go down and grab a couple of hours' sleep?" I asked.

"Heck, no!" he said. "I've been listening to those bulls for the last three nights and——"

"For the last three nights?" I echoed. "And you didn't let me know?"

"Huh? Why should I?" he returned. "I figured we was fighting Germans and not a bunch of bullfrogs!"

Safe Enough

With Frogs Croaking

"It's sweet music to me," he went on. "And as long as they're out there singing we're safe."

"What? You mean to say—"

"I'm not saying anything, corporal . . . except that we're safe enough as long as that bunch of baritones continue their serenade!"

I shrugged and went on down the trench figuring that he must have gone goofy all of a sudden.

A couple of nights later one of our machine gunners traversed his guns in the direction of the choristers. I came out of the dugout in time to see Harvey make a flying leap for the gunner.

When I finally pulled them apart Harvey was sputtering and gasping and the gunner was trying to make some more passes at him.

"Just let me get him once, corporal," pleaded the machine gunner. "The hick ganged me from behind!"

"You try killing off those frogs and I'll bang you again!" Harvey sputtered. "And that goes for everybody else!" he added, as a snicker reached him from further down the trench. The laughter subsided.

Along about midnight the German artillery broke loose, showering down with all they had on our particular bit of trench. It wasn't until an hour before dawn that they slackened up gradually, dying away into silence. In the unearthly silence following that cacophony of sound Harvey was on sentry duty again. A little later I joined him on the fire step. Couldn't sleep after all that clatter.

"Everything's okay, corporal," said Harvey when I came up. "Listen, you can hear those frogs still chirping away for all they're worth. As long as they keep that up we're———"

He broke off abruptly, grabbing me tightly by the arm.

"Fritz is coming!" he whispered hoarsely.

"Yeah? What'd he do? Send you a personal message?"

"Heck, no! I got ears, ain't it?" he retorted in all seriousness. "Get the gang out. Quick, corporal!"

Don't ask me why I trusted him. Green as he was, something in his manner and voice warned me that he was right for once.

Machine gunners, riflemen and bombers came tumbling out of dugouts and lined the parapet in time to meet the onslaught of a German raiding party that had reached the wire unobserved.

It was over as suddenly as it had started. A hectic half hour and the remnants of the raiding party melted into the darkness as quietly as they had appeared, following Harvey's timely warning. No doubt about his having saved us from a bad time, I thought, checking up for squad casualties.

I found him a few minutes later after the hubbub had died down. He was standing on the firestep again, staring moodily across the parapet.

"They've gone and ruined it all," he said gloomily when I stepped up beside him.

"Who's ruined what?" I demanded, not quite understanding his cryptic utterance.

"That bunch of Fritzies. They've scared away those frogs and we'll never hear them again," and he shook his head dolefully.

"Aw, forget your old bullfrogs," I told him. "What I want to know is how in heck you knew Fritzie was on his way over."

He grinned. "That's easy, corporal. 'member me telling you we were safe as long as those bullfrogs was singing?"

I nodded.

"Well, as soon as they stopped their croaking this morning I knew there were men prowling around out there. And of course they had to be Fritzies. If you knew anything at all about frogs you'd know they won't chirp when there's anybody near them."

"Well, of all the—"

"And now they've been chased away, I guess," he mourned, his face the picture of utter dejection.

"Shh! Listen, corporal, what's that!" and he held up a warning hand.

A harsh grating sound was floating in across the misty terrain. The chorus of the bullfrogs raised in sardonic laughter over their part in [illegible] the trench raid. A slow smile etched itself across Harvey Hawkins' solid features.

"Yep!" he said, "that's them! Good old singing bullfrogs! Just like the bunch on the old pond back home!"

THEY USE LOOT TO BUY UP AND SELL AUTOS

New York Detective Expert Tells How Gang Shuns Old-Time "Fences"

Evidence linking the holdup men who stole $100,000 in gems in Newton last Wednesday with a gang operating nationally has been uncovered by police and private detectives, it was announced today.

Shortly after police made this disclosure, Noel Scaffa, head of the Scaffa Detective Agency of New York city, a detective of international reputation on jewelry cases, arrived here from New York.

Scaffa conferred with Deputy Supt. James McDevitt at Boston police headquarters and then went to Newton to make a personal check on various angles of the investigation, after which he left again for New York.

N. Y. DETECTIVE HERE.

It was understood that his brief visit was to match information in his possession concerning a national gang of gem robbers with the evidence uncovered in this vicinity.

Police also revealed today that jewels stolen in five holdups in this vicinity recently have in some cases been disposed of in the same peculiar way that robbers used after a big holdup in Niagara Falls and probably used also in other places.

Instead of taking the stolen gems to "fences" where the return would have been small, they put them up either as first payments or as collateral guaranteeing first payments on automobiles.

These cars were then taken to another city and quickly disposed of at a cut rate which was, however, more than could have been obtained for the diamonds through the channels formerly used by thieves.

SOME OF LOOT FOUND.

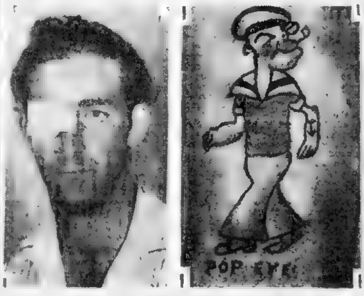
A number of diamonds have been recovered by private detectives and some of these are believed to be part of the loot taken in Boston robberies. The settings have been changed, however, and careful study by experts is necessary to fully identify them.

Another daring diamond robbery which police believe may have been committed by the same gang that figured in the holdups here took place yesterday in Watertown. It was where Julius Drefuss, president of a New York diamond concern, was kidnaped and robbed of unset stones valued at $100,000.

Stove Blast Fires House

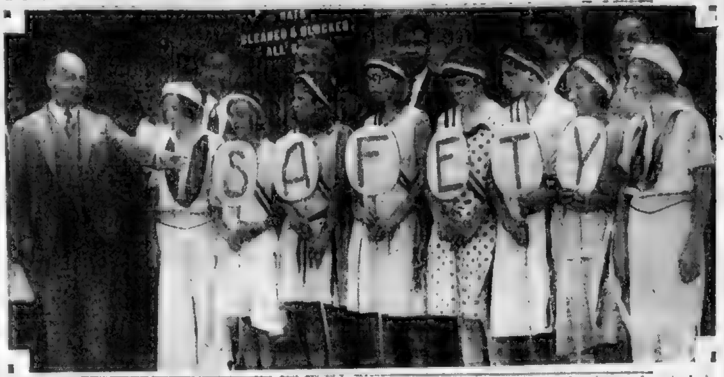
Louis St. Peter, 40, of 132 Lake st., East Weymouth, was burned last night when he threw an oil stove from his home after it had exploded. Fire caused damage estimated at $2000.

POPEYE CHARM OF BRAWN



Four-leaf clovers and rabbit hind legs may be all right in some cases, but Ralph Ginsberg, 21 Lawrence st., Roxbury, has evolved a brand new idea in charms. An ardent admirer of "Popeye," the warring sailor who makes you laugh daily in the Boston Evening American comic strip, Ginsberg has had the great battler tattooed on his arm. Here's his own drawing of Popeye, who incidentally didn't give Ginsberg this bad eye. (Staff photo.)

LOOK OUT! CHILDREN TOLD TO WATCH WILD DRIVERS



Safety!! Safety for children. Safety for old folk. Safety for all. That's just what Registrar of Motor Vehicles Morgan T. Ryan preaches daily. He talked that same doctrine before 2000 children at the Strand-Publix Theater, in Dorchester, yesterday. As you note "Safety" was the slogan of yesterday's meeting. The photograph was made at the theater which shows Mr. Ryan with the Dorchester girls carrying the letters that spell "Safety." (Staff photo.)

BRIDEGROOM IS JAILED AS THIEF

A bridegroom of a week and his companion in a Quincy burglary went to jail today after both pleaded guilty in Quincy court to breaking and entering and larceny charges.

The young benedict is Albert J. Kelley, 25, of Mercer st., South Boston.

Kelley was sentenced to six months and Leon J. Grondin, 37, father of eight children and next-door neighbor of Kelley, was given a three-months sentence.

They were charged with breaking and entering the home of Herman F. Woodbury of 130 Kemper st., Wollaston, on July 30. The Woodbury family was away at the time.

Inspectors Fallon and Hinchon of the Quincy police traced the thieves through a registration number of an automobile furnished them by a woman neighbor of the Woodburys.

Kelley's bride did not appear in court today, but a woman relative turned over a coffee urn, a ring, a bank and a lady's watch to the court.

Both men had pleaded not guilty but after a talk with the court changed their pleas to guilty and accepted their sentences.

GIRL FINED IN AUTO DEATH

A youth and young girl were both found guilty of improper driving of the same automobile, in East Cambridge district court today, in a case arising from a fatal accident on Concord ave. last month.

Miss Mildred Keefe, 27, of Brayton rd., Brighton, was fined $50, and Herbert S. Hurd, 23, of Sutherland rd., Arlington, was fined $100, for driving so as to endanger the lives and safety of the public.

Testimony showed that Miss Keefe was driving under Hurd's guidance when the car turned over, fatally injuring a third occupant, Miss Betty Bush, 26, of Margaret st., Arlington.

Judge Counihan found no probable cause on manslaughter charges, found both not guilty of driving under the influence of liquor, and found Hurd not guilty of leaving the scene of an accident and letting an incompetent person drive.

Struck by Stone, Swimmer Rescued

Knocked unconscious while swimming in Black's Creek by a stone hurled from a passing automobile, John Cameron, 11, of 270 Copeland st., West Quincy, was saved from drowning by Peter Caruso, State life guard.

ELY PROTESTS RATE INCREASE

Gov Ely today ordered Atty.-Gen Warner to voice the State's legal objections to the proposed 15 per cent increase in railroad rates now before the Interstate Commerce Commission in a hearing at Portland Me.

"Such an increase would be detrimental to Massachusetts industries," the Governor wrote in a letter to Warner.

"Because of the seriousness of the situation and its detrimental effect on Massachusetts I direct you to intervene in behalf of the Commonwealth for the purpose of exerting every legal influence to prevent the granting of the petition."

Gov Ely pointed out that the rates would penalize Massachusetts 30 per cent, inasmuch as the manufacturing industry requires the shipment of raw materials into the State and the finished product out.

GIRL OF TODAY FEARS SHE WILL 'MISS' SOMETHING

By HELEN ROWLAND

THE GREAT obsession which seems to be tormenting the girl of today is the fear that she will MISS something in this life.

• • •

She feels sure that her mother, who had only a few hand-kissing beaus, a conventional romance or two, one husband and a dull but happy domestic career, just missed "EVERYTHING."

• • •

She goes after what she calls "LIFE," with such a breathless rush that she misses her goal and passes up the real thing for a lot of synthetic excitement, which gets her only a headache and sometimes a permanent heartache.

HELEN ROWLAND.

• • •

She sights for thrills, "experience," Big Moments! But thrills and Big Moments and love are things that you never find when you go AFTER them. They always come by accident, and when you are least expecting them. Ever notice that?

• • •

As for all this "experience," these experimental love affairs which the modern girl thinks she must have before settling down to marriage—that is just a little more bunk, which she has picked up from the sex-novels.

• • •

To have REAL LOVE from just ONE man, even though he is so prosaic as to be your own husband, will afford you just as much experience, dear heart, as to be loved by a dozen men.

• • •

There are certain Eternal Verities, which all the "modernism" in the world never can and never will change. One of these is that every woman wants LOVE. Real love, not just casual petting or synthetic love or a passing "pashun." She MUST have love, or her life is not complete.

• • •

Another is that, while a man and a woman may be "equal" in these days, they are not ALIKE; and a woman cannot play a man's game and win. She may chatter as loudly and bravely as she pleases about the "single standard"; but man's standard is not woman's standard; because every woman is at heart essentially a one-man woman. Variety may be the spice of love, for a man, but a normal woman is always a monogamist.

• • •

Still another of the Eternal Verities is that no he-man will ever accept the "single standard." He may play around with the free-and-easy girl; but when he seeks a permanent love, he wants a woman who is not so "broad-minded." And he wants to do his own courting and pursuing.

• • •

You can fill your house with modernistic furniture and your head with modernistic ideas. But you can't make sun rise in the west, and you can't alter masculine nature. And if any woman ever caught a man by openly chasing him, it was because he had a broken leg and couldn't RUN!

Give Cod Liver Oil in Baby's Daily Diet

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

IT IS now an accepted fact most babies will benefit if cod-liver oil is given regularly before the end of the first months of life. In fact, it has been recommended by many authorities that the use of cod-liver oil should begin by the end of the second week.

Dr. Copeland

Rickets is, as a rule, a condition that starts early, in the first months of life. It appears when the baby is growing most rapidly. Unfortunately, it may not be recognized until quite late, indeed not until weakness of the muscles and deformity of the bones become conspicuous. It is a condition that may occur in breast-fed, as well as in artificially fed babies.

The underlying disease can be entirely cured or prevented by giving the baby sufficient direct sunlight, or by giving cod liver oil. It is advised that both be employed.

You may begin giving this medication in half teaspoonful doses twice a day. By the end of six weeks, the amount may be increased to one teaspoonful twice a day and by the end of three months, to one and one-half teaspoonfuls twice a day. At about the fourth month the amount may be increased to two teaspoonfuls twice a day and this dosage may be continued through the first two years.

Baron Must Give Up Pearls

AND GAIGERN. Without a doubt he was in love. Quite apart from the pearls, he thought, not without shame, quite apart from this ill-fated affair of the pearls, I am a rotter. I climb into a room and play an atrocious farce and the woman believes in it. She positively likes it. Every man acts a part and every woman believes it. Every man is really a swindler and an intruder at the outset, but then later on—well, it has come true. I love you. Yes, I love you, je t'aime, je t'aime. You have made a fine conquest, little woman . . .

They had talked of many things. It was light. The street was silent. A streak of pale dawning light came through the curtain. The pattern of the wallpaper began to steal out from the walls in the first glimmer of day. Grusinskaya, worn and tired, but happy, dozed. Gaigern felt his way in the half light to the door of the balcony and slowly drew the curtains. Grusinskaya did not stir. Now, thought he, I must put this business of the pearls to rights again. He was surprised at himself for taking it so easily. A lost round, he thought without ill humor. He often applied sporting terms like this to his adventurous undertakings.

Outside a thin, drifting mist of early morning hung over the street. Not a car nor a passerby was to be seen. The balcony railing shone with moisture. Gaigern found his thief's socks on the balcony and stuffed them hurriedly into his pockets with the gloves and flashlight and the pearls. Turning back into the room he drew back the curtains. Grusinskaya slept.

Gaigern had a sudden tender inspiration. He took the teacup full of veronal from the table and the empty glass tube too, and went with them into the bathroom. He emptied the cup, washed it as carefully as a nurse would do for a child, and dried it on his handkerchief. Grusinskaya sighed in her sleep when he returned. He bent over her attentively, but she was still asleep. It had grown lighter and he now saw her face quite clearly. Her hair had fallen smoothly back from her face and exposed the narrow temples with their shadowed hollows. Two deep wrinkles beneath the closed eyes showed the approach of age. Gaigern saw it, but it did not displease him. Her mouth over the delicate though faded chin was wonderful. He scrutinized her face, as though it were new country in which he went to seek adventure. He found two mysterious symmetrical lines descending from her temples past her ears to her neck as thin as threads, and lighter in color than the rest of her skin. He passed his finger lightly over them. They were fine scars that framed her face as though they were the edges of a mask. Suddenly Gaigern realized what they were. They were vanity scars, incisions in the skin, with the object of stretching it and preserving its youth. He had read of such things. He shook his head with an incredulous smile.

With an extreme tenderness he laid his face to hers as though he would infuse into her something of his own vitality. The strength, the softness, and the pity that inspired his love for her at this moment filled him with astonishment. He felt clean and upright and a little ridiculous in the emotion he felt over this poor woman.

He moved away and stood for a few minutes with contracted brow and open mouth before the looking glass, plunged in reflection. He was wondering whether it was possible to keep the pearls in spite of all.

No, it was not possible to keep the pearls. For a month, at least, he was still Baron von Gaigern, a somewhat easy-going fellow who kept bad company, in debt, certainly, but otherwise reputable. If he left the room with the pearls in his possession the police would hear of it within an hour or two, and his life as a man of leisure was over. He would be hunted down like any other criminal. And this would not suit him at all. The chance of circumstance made it impossible to steal the pearls. All he could hope was to be given them if he was patient. I must wait, thought Gaigern and sighed deeply. His calculations so far were level-headed and perfectly clear. He did not go on to confess that a great deal more lay behind them. He did not wish to be ridiculous in his own eyes and he hated sentiment. He looked into the glass and pulled a face. Looking at the sleeping Grusinskaya he thought I'd much rather give you a present, a big one, something pretty and costly, something to rejoice your heart, you poor dear. He pulled the pearl necklace out of his pocket, cautious not to make a sound. It did not please him now in the least. Perhaps, after all, they were false, in spite of all the newspapers' paragraphs. Perhaps they were not worth half their reputed value. In any case it cost him little to say goodby to them now.

Grusinskaya tried to wake up, but she found her head swathed in sleep. The veronal, she thought, and closed her eyes. She had been afraid of waking lately.

Marriage---and 'Competent' Woman Secretary

By WINIFRED BLACK

LOUISE is going to be married. Louise's mother is glad, and her brother is glad, and her little sister is glad, and Louise is glad and Louise's young man is just tickled to death.

Winifred Black

But Louise's boss is furious.

"I'll never put another woman in a responsible position again as long as I live," says Louise's boss.

That girl came into my office when she was just out of high school. I knew her father, we were kids together and I was glad to give the girl a chance. Before I was through with her, or she was through with me, I almost felt as if she were giving me a chance.

"That girl is as smart as they make them." Yes, he said smart, he didn't say clever, or efficient. Old-fashioned fellow, Louise's Boss smokes cigars instead of cigarettes, goes to a barber shop for a quick shave. And says Mam when he talks to any woman over 25.

"Why, that girl got so she knew my business better than I did, and she tended to it, too. She was always making suggestions and putting in new methods.

"Why, she was the one that started that new branch across the river. I was afraid of it at first, but she took right hold of it and put it through like a streak of lightning.

"I depended on that girl—why, she saved me from an awful fluke on that Western deal I made. Sort of had a hunch about it, you know the way women do and by George, her hunch was right.

"I haven't kept an appointment book for years—Louise took care of it for me. She bought the tickets for the family vacation, she hunted up a farmhouse for the Misses when the Misses took a notion to go back to the soil for the Summer. She found us the best nurse we ever had for Junior when he was teething, and nobody could do a thing with him. She caught the chief clerk and one of the subs whispering our business to our closest competitor. Why, she even told me where to get the best set of golf clubs. I've depended on that girl for years, and now she's thrown me down for a young whipper snapper that doesn't know enough to go out when it shines.

"Now if she was a man, I'd be glad she was going to be married; a man settles down and works twice as hard when he gets married. He's more responsible, more ambitious, you can lean back on him more.

"But a woman—who are you and what is business, once she gets that marrying idea in her head.

I'm going to look around to find someone to take that girl's place, but believe me it isn't going to be a girl this time, or a woman either. It's going to be a man.

"Marriage is an asset to a man.

"To a woman it's a liability."

And that's how Louise's Boss feels about Louise's marriage, and really all things considered, you can't exactly blame him, can you?

Canning by the Open Kettle

By MARTHA LEE

From Martha Lee's Wednesday Morning Broadcast Over Station WAAB.

NOW GATHER round me all you girls who prefer to cook your fruits and vegetables in the good old-fashioned open-kettle method. And I'm going to whisper in your private ear that I'm very fond of this method myself, especially for peaches.

Martha Lee

This process can be done in seven simple steps.

1 Place the prepared food in an aluminum utensil and cook until tender. Add salt to vegetables and sugar to fruits to taste.

2 Sterilize the jars, caps and rubbers for 10 minutes or longer by boiling them in water immediately before they are to be used. All three items should be kept in the boiling water until the moment the jars are to be filled and the rubber and caps set in place.

3—Place the hot sterile jars in a shallow pan of hot water in order to eliminate breakage.

4—Fill immediately with boiling hot food until overflowing.

5—Place the rubber and cover on the jar and completely seal it.

6—Invert the jars to cool. Avoid a direct draft on them, but cool as quickly as possible. To prevent berries from floating, place the jar on its side and roll it at intervals.

7 Wipe off the jars, label and store in a cool, dark, dry place.

Any special canning recipes I can send you? I'll be glad to. If you'll just drop me a line, enclosing a loose 2-cent stamp for prompt reply. Cold pack canning in this column tomorrow.

Faithfully yours,

The Murder of the Choir Singer

By ANTHONY ABBOT

"THE BEAZELEYS are a stubborn lot," said Colt, "but you were on the right track, just the same."

"Tip me off in advance, Thatcher. What is the big idea of the conventicle of all the interested parties downstairs?"

"I would, Dougherty, if I knew what was going to happen. I don't. I'm only testing a theory from certain rather nebulous indications. But you will see the thing develop, if it does develop, just as soon as I do."

"Well," sighed Dougherty resignedly, "when do we start?"

"Right now. We've got the whole crowd downstairs. But there is only one witness among them that I believe can be induced to lead us to the guilty person. And that valuable witness is one who have rather neglected."

"Paddy Curtainwood?"

"Bessie Struber!"

"Bessie Struber!"

"Ay. The once-stylish Bessie Struber that is now the drab. Behind that girl's singular mental ailment, the gradual and continual wasting away of her feminine vanity, and behind her hard work, and the mystery of what she does with her money, may very well lie the missing link in all our calculations. Tony, tell Schultz to send up Bessie Struber.

The former secretary of Doctor Beazeley came into the murder room in a tremble of apprehension. Colt quickly offered her a chair. She sat down, the same brown monochrome of a person that had come to Headquarters yesterday and answered all our questions with such straightforward frankness. But now her manner was palpably different.

She glanced around the room as if terrified by its very walls. This could have been because she realized from newspaper accounts that here a man and a woman from her own circle had met violent deaths. In his gentlest voice, Colt tried to put her at her ease.

"It is possible," he began, "that you can help us solve this hideous tragedy."

"I? But I know nothing about it, Mr. Colt."

"Nevertheless, you may help us, Miss Struber."

"I will do my best."

"I am sure you will. I want you to understand in the beginning that I have the most definite and practical end in view in putting to you the questions that I propose."

"Yes, Mr. Colt."

"Although they may seem like very personal questions, Miss Struber."

"Personal?"

"Do you remember an outing that was held by the Sunday School of your church in the Autumn about five or six years ago?"

The brilliant brown eyes of Bessie Struber were filled suddenly, inexplicably, with a startled light.

"An outing five or six years ago— We have had so many outings."

"Perhaps," pursued Colt, "I can refresh your memory by reminding you of what you wore. You had on a toque of felt, fitting very snugly over your head, and scalloped in front to resemble a Roman helmet. You wore those same old-fashioned pendants that are now in your ears, and a fashionable ensemble suit. The skirt was only an inch below your knees, and you wore high-heeled shoes."

This simple and detailed recital was a description of the costume worn by the girl in the picture on the study wall in the church. It produced a distressing effect upon Bessie Struber. Across her pale, thin lips fluttered a quivering motion, ghost-like, and gone almost before I noticed it. Her eyes were suddenly moist. For a moment she did not speak. Then, clearing her throat, she answered:

"It might be so. I used to dress like that when I was young."

It was indeed a mystery—what had made in her this dismal alteration. But even more mysterious, or so it seemed to me at the time, was Colt's reason for pursuing this, for twanging the broken strings of a rusted charm and vanity.

"Do you mind my saying that on this particular outing to which I refer you were one of the loveliest and most charming of women?" resumed Thatcher Colt softly.

"You were there?"

Her voice was hoarse; her eyes, looking obliquely across the room, seemed to fear some impending discovery.

"No, I was not there, but I have seen your picture, Miss Struber."

She nodded abstractedly.

"Why are you bringing all that up now?"

"You were beautiful then," insisted Thatcher Colt, "and suddenly you seemed to change. Don't think me harsh. It was not your beauty that changed. It was something else within you. You lost the will to be beautiful, the wish to be young, the capacity to be happy."

She gave him another quick glance.

"I don't know why you say these things to me."

"You changed," he hurried on remorselessly, "and my inquiries among your friends have shown me that you changed almost visibly from the time that you came back from a vacation and found Evelyn Saunders in your place."

She looked away thoughtfully and took a deep breath.

"I was ill," she said. "That was why the doctor sent me away. I suppose that was the beginning of my bad health. But I don't see why you dwell upon that. What has my health, or the loss of what you call my beauty, got to do with this matter?"

"You recall," said Colt, "that I warned you my questions would be personal but practical. When did you leave the service of Dr. Beazeley?"

"In August, five years ago."

The frail hands tightened on the sides of her chair.

Let Your Heart Decide, Says Miss Fairfax

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

My problem is rather unusual. I am a great believer in the stars, or astrology. I believe that there are certain people that we could be happy with if we could but learn their birth dates and make a complete analysis of their astrological selves—shortcomings, good points to be compared with ours, and from that history make our selection.

Now please, Miss Fairfax don't think me an old prude, because I'm far from that. I'm young, in my teens, and considered good-looking. I have met many boys and all are exceedingly nice to me, but when I succeed in getting their birth dates and investigating their "starry" selves I am greatly surprised to find my affection all wasted, and I discourage all further attentions.

UNUSUAL.

Dear Unusual: Your interest in astrology is along a path that has held the imaginations of millions of people for centuries. But I would hesitate to advise you to decide such a momentous question as to whether or not you love a young man on such semi-celestial evidence. It seems to me your heart should decide that.

Her Soaring Ambition

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I want to do lots of things—have the nicest man in the world in love with me—inherit a fortune and to have a career. I want people to look up to me and really to be somebody.

Do tell me how to manage these things. I am starting early enough at my age which is SIXTEEN.

Dear Sixteen: The man you marry, no matter whom you choose, will be the "nicest man in the world." And it will be up to the two of you to keep up the illusion. That's the real rub. It will take common sense and patience.

Your inheritance will have to take care of itself.

As to a career, set up a mark you can hit. Not too high at first. Raise the mark, as your aim improves. Keep at it. And the best of good luck to you!

Closeup on Champion and Challenger

A Dempsey from wide open spaces, a Tunney from big city's slums,
From Mother Earth's far four corners the warriors of ringdom come.
Fitzsimmons, a fighting blacksmith; Jim Corbett, a bank cashier,
Environment, job means nothing, to Knights of the Scrambled Ear.
They're miners from bowels of mountains, a Sharkey from off of the sea,
In breeding and blood they're everything, from Eskimo to Chinee.
And some of 'em live like Spartans, nose close to old grindstone,
And some of 'em train to a pattern, no trainer would ever condone.
It must be that fighting's born in 'em, these Sons of the Sock and the Clout.
If real fighting stuff wasn't in 'em it certainly wouldn't crop out!

There is no sport where environment apparently counts less than in boxing. The ring champions are of all kinds and types and spring from every environment. The Dempseys, Ketchels and Jeffries of the wide open spaces are matched by the Leonards and Tunneys from off the sidewalks of New York. Bob Fitzsimmons was a blacksmith and Jim Corbett a bank clerk. England's great Jem Driscoll and Jimmy Wilde came out of the mines of Wales. John Bull has got some of his greatest fighting men out of the slums of Whitechapel. We've had a Filipino, next door to a Chinee, champion of the world. If the fighting is born in a man it apparently will "come out" regardless of blood, breeding, environment, occupation or anything.

Fighters differ in modes of training as they do in occupations and environment. Jack Sharkey is a quiet, home-loving man of steady habits. Mickey Walker is a Broadway Boy. Gene Tunney was a fine, clean living young man. His Nemesis was Harry Greb, as wild and riotous a liver as the game has had since the days of John L. Sullivan. But even Greb in his palmy days never hit the high spots as does Maxey Rosenbloom, who defends his light heavyweight championship against Jimmy Slattery in Ebbets Field, Brooklyn, tonight.

Rosenbloom is the Playboy of Boxing. His training quarters e the night clubs. He does his road work on Broadway. His aining mates are dizzy blondes. Like a certain brand of popu- medicine he works while others sleep. And he sleeps while ers work. He keeps Broadway hours. How he does it and ps in fighting's front rank nobody knows. But there he is, right front, world's light heavyweight champion.

Maxey has a boxing style as quaint and unorthodox as his ethod of living. Because of his hitting with the open glove they ll him "Slapsey Maxey." In action he is as loose as his methods of living. He never sets or tenses. He throws leather from every angle, every position. An opponent never knows where the next punch or slap is coming from. Always Maxey is whirling along, cuffing, slapping, prodding, eternally keeping an opponent off balance and never quite able to get started. They may call him "Slapsey Maxey," but they always come back to see him slap. Maxey gives the fans a run for their money. Against him an opponent has to fight or jump over the ropes.

Jimmy Slattery, Rosenbloom's old playmate—this is their seventh meeting—who will try to topple Slapsey Maxey off the throne tonight, is a product of Buffalo's old First Ward, "Fingy" Connors' old bailiwick. Jimmy comes from a district where all the noises of the world are born. It's there where water and land traffic meet in the great lake metropolis. Day and night roars machinery, rumbles truck, shrieks siren, clank and rattle huge chains, pound the mighty hammers and bellow the forges and blast furnaces. Buffalo's old First Ward is the busiest, most noisy, the most congested, never-sleeping spot in this wide world. There Jimmy Slattery was born and raised.

Jimmy Slattery is the Pride of the Old First Ward. Because they made him Pride of the Old First, Jimmy has been under a grave handicap. When the Old First wanted to celebrate Jimmy had to celebrate, too. If the Old First had a ball in which Jimmy Slattery didn't lead the grand march, then it wasn't a ball at all and everyone stayed away. Churches, clubs, lodges, social organizations of the Old First couldn't hold a shindy of any kind in which Jimmy Slattery wasn't guest of honor. They thought they were honoring him, but they were hurting him. Like many others Jimmy Slattery was a victim of his friends.

It wasn't only Jimmy's own Irish from the Old First who burdened him with extra weight in the Fistic Handicap. Bedad, the Dutch had a hand in it! Didn't Mayor Fleischman, or some other Dutch mayor of Buffalo, pick Jimmy up and bundle him off to Europe with the Hotel Men? And didn't Jimmy lap up so much Wuertzburger and Muenchner and Hoffbrau while over there that he came back looking more like a Dutch burgomaster than a fighter? It doesn't do for a puncher to have a paunch. Jimmy found that out.

Jimmy Slattery has been training that paunch off. High up in Gene Tunney's old training camp at Speculator, where the pines come down to bathe their feet in the waters of Lake Pleasant and where the blue Adirondacks tower all around, Jimmy is reported to have been training as never before. Is it too late? Will the reformed Playboy of Buffalo beat the wildest, most roistering blade Broadway ever had? We'll know tonight.

Two Playboys of the Night Clubs will meet in ring tonight.
And battle for the title in fast and furious fight;
Before the shindy's over they may not feel so gay.
They'll long for things lost by them on streets they call Broadway.

STRATTON IS DEFEATED BY DOLAN

Davis Lapham, Ct., defeated Edmund F. Burke, Rhode Island, 1 up, 19 holes; James H. Doland, Jr., Mass., defeated Henry P. Stratton, Mass., 3 and 2; Joseph M. Batchelder, Mass., defeated Wilfred Crossley, Mass., 1 up, D. S. Gamble, Ct., defeated E. S. Busiere, Mass., 3 and 1.

By BILL GRIMES

After three rounds of match play, the field in the New England amateur golf championship has been reduced to four players, two representing Massachusetts and two from Connecticut.

In the semi final this afternoon Davis Lapham, Wee Taas Country Club, Stanford, Ct., is playing Jimmy Dolan of the Wachusett C C of Worcester, and in the lower half of the bracket Joe Batchelder of Salem is clashing with D. S. Gamble of the Race Brook C. C. Orange, Conn.

All four quarter final matches were keenly contested. There was one extra hole match in which Davis Lapham, junior at Yale, defeated Edmund Burke, Wanmetonomy. Wilfred Crossley, the ex-junior champion, took Joe Batchelder of Salem to the home green, Eddie Basiere, Sandy Burr, battled E. S. Gamble for 17 holes and Jimmy Dolan eliminated Emory Stratton, 3 and 2.

[illegible] Batchelder shot the best golf. Despite the fact that his card shows two sixes Batchelder [illegible] a 74. Gamble was out in 34 against Basiere, which is one under par. Burke was 36 to the turn [illegible] Lapham [illegible] round up with [illegible] Eddie Burke his victim.

Lapham and Burke Halved First Two Holes

After Lapham and Burke had halved the first two holes, the Yale man took the lead when Burke pushed his second shot into the woods going to the third and went to two up when Burke was trapped going to the fourth.

He then put his third over the green. They both missed short putts 4s in the fifth and Lapham slipped up on a six footer at the sixth for a birdie three.

With Lapham on the seventh green from the tee, Burke pulled a spoon shot down the hill and lost the hole to a three.

They halved the eighth with fours and a top tee shot by Lapham at the ninth opened the gate for Burke to win his first hole which he did with a five.

Lapham put his third shot going to the long 11th four feet from the cup and after Burke had missed his four, dropped his putt for a birdie to be three up again.

Lapham was still three up going to the 14th when his second shot caught a trap and he lost the hole to a par five. Although they were both trapped with their second going to the 15th, Burke came out to strong and went over getting a six and losing the hole.

Burke Put on Great Finish

Three down and three to play, Burke put on the best finish of the championship. He dropped a 4-footer for a birdie at the 16th pushed in a 2-footer for a bird at the 17th, and won the 18th with a regulation 4 after Lapham had missed his drive.

Going to the 19th, Burke's second was in the road, while Lapham hit a beautiful shot from the rough to the edge of the green, and Burke's chip left him a 15-footer which hung on the lip of the cup but lost the match as Lapham was down in 1 putt for par.

Dolan Wins First Three Holes From Shulton

In the Dolan-Stratton match, the Worcester boy jumped his opponent and piled up a three-hole lead during the outward round.

Stratton started off with a win when Dolan was trapped with his second and took a five, but at the next hole Stratton's approach trickled over the green and into a trap allowing Dolan to square the match. Although Dolan hooked his drive at the third so far off the line that he was forced to play a safety shot on his second, he won the hole with a five for the wind caught Stratton's brassie shot and drifted it into the brook.

Dolan drove to the edge of the fourth green, chipped on and went down on one putt for a birdie and win. They halved the fifth with regulation 4s, Stratton's drive at the sixth was so long that it went into the trap in front of the green. This tough break cost him the hole for he did not get out.

Dolan laid his second going to the eighth six feet from the pin, but Stratton was in the trap in two. After Stratton had missed his four, he conceded Dolan a three. It was Dolan that caught the trap at the

Bedridden Lad Made Happy by Chuck Klein

Philadelphia, Aug. 5 (AP)—Chuck Klein's 24th home run at Baker Bowl yesterday wasn't autographed when it went over the fence, but it is now.

The ball landed at the feet of a neighbor of Buddy Meyers, 12, who has been bedridden. The neighbor took the ball to the sick lad.

Last night Klein heard of the incident and drove out to northeast Philadelphia to place his name on the horsehide. Buddy got so excited he almost wiggled out of bed.

The Braves [illegible] the [illegible] in a single game with the Quakers [illegible] Hurls Socks Seibold and "Jumbo" [illegible] Elliott are down to do the [illegible] and [illegible] third and [illegible]

Ed Lefty Brandt failed to win his 11th game of the year in the opener of Monday's twin bill in Philly, being outpitched by Ray Benge and losing 3 to 2. Wee Willie Sherdel came back in the nightcap to turn in a 4-to-2 triumph and give the Warriors an even break for the afternoon.

By breaking even with the Shotton gang the Braves gained a full game on the Robins who dropped a pair to the Giants and are now only four games back of fourth place.

The Braves, after holding their opponents scoreless for 15 innings, collapsed in the sixth and seventh frames of their game with the Cards and were beaten by the champions 7 to 1. As a result they are now a full game back of the Braves.

The second-place Giants drew within seven games of the top in the National League by beating the Robins twice while the Cards were whipping the Bucs. The Cubs remained only one-half game back of the McGrawmen by defeating the last-place Reds twice.

The Reds had been shut out in four consecutive games before the opener of yesterday's twin bill and failed to score in the first five innings of that game, but they broke through with a run in the sixth and another in the seventh, losing out 4 to 2.

In the only American League game played the Chicago White Sox escaped falling into the cellar by turning back the Detroit Tigers. Lessons in Wrestling

ALL SHOULD KNOW THIS HOLD

Japanese Arm Lock and Head Scissors, a good hold to try on your relatives who stay at your summer cottage over a week. GUS SONNENBERG is shown illustrating hold with DICK ALBRIGHT.

By GUS SONNENBERG

AS TOLD TO GEORGE GRIMM

LESSON NO. 16

The Japanese arm lock and head scissors may be procured in several ways, but the most usual is to begin with the half Nelson, which already has been described in these lessons.

After securing the half Nelson and having brought your opponent to the floor you have him in a position where his head is held to the floor with your left arm.

In turning the opponent, the proper manner is to reach under his body and grasp his right arm which he is using as a brace to keep up off the floor as far as possible.

Having secured this hold pull on with your right arm, at the same time using the half Nelson leverage which you have under his left arm and over his neck, to turn him over.

As the opponent is turned off balance, change from the half Nelson to the Japanese arm lock which also has been described previously, at the same time throwing your legs around the opponent's head and putting every bit of pressure you have.

This is known as the head scissors and is a punishing as well as pinning hold, as one can well imagine by studying the accompanying illustration.

BRAVES COMING HOME

TRIBE, ROBINS AT WIGWAM TOMORROW

By JOE CASHMAN

The battling Braves, Boston's most successful if not strongest team in a decade, return tomorrow after a 25-day road trip to remain at the Wigwam until August 26

The fast-stepping Brooklyn Robins will be the Warriors' first opponents. Your Uncle Wilbert's four placers will play three games in as many afternoons, starting on the morrow.

The Phils will be the Sunday attraction and Monday will be an off day. Then will come the Western clubs, the Reds, Cubs, Pirates and Cardinals in the order named.

This home stand will be the last long one of the season for the McKechniemen. After it is finished they will have only three games with the Giants and three with the Phils to play at the Tepee.

The Tribe played fine ball even though it didn't fare so well on the road. It went West after splitting a doubleheader with the Robins in Brooklyn and split four games with the Reds and two with the Pirates, lost three out of four to the Cubs and took two out of four from the Cards.

Upon its return East it dropped three out of four to the Giants and split a twin-bill with the Phils yesterday. It has another game to play in Quakertown this p. m.

Braves Have Chance to Displace Robins

Despite its failure to hold its own on the trails, the club is still in fifth place, and though it has lost a lot of ground to the sixth place Pirates, it is closer to the last money berth, now occupied by the Robins, than it was when it left home.

Everything considered, the Braves have made a remarkable showing this year and the lion's share of the credit for its great work belongs to Manager Bill McKechnie.

Expected in the spring to be strong at the bat due to the acquisition of Worthington, Schulmerich and Sheely to help out Berger, the club has been weak with the stick all season and today has the lowest batting average in the league, but McKechnie, by developing a mediocre pitching staff into one of the best in the league and making each and every one of his athletes hustle all the time, has kept the outfit in or near the first division from the start.

In every city the Tribesmen have visited their aggressiveness has been praised. Critics are unanimous in the opinion that the Wigwam athletes have more pep and hustle than any other aggregation in either league.

A fair ball club that fights can always beat a stronger rival that merely goes through the motions and if McKechnie can keep his charges on their toes for the rest of the way, they will stand a chance of finishing among the top four, for the strength of the Cards has discouraged the other three first-division inhabitants.

Moral: Read the Paper

By MYLES T. McSWEENEY

The Boston Evening American is always anxious to assist its readers by kindly and profitable advice.

But in printing a series of wrestling lessons by Gus Sonnenberg, the Sports Editor thought that he would assist persons only in learning or understanding the great mat game.

The lessons must have done much more. Listen to this:

"Dear Sir: Allow me to express my undying gratitude for the wrestling lessons you are printing. Before reading them, my relatives were accustomed to come to my Summer home and stay beyond the time allowed by etiquette, good morals and my bank roll.

"Since studying your lessons, I have been able to get rid of them with amazing ease. I just try out the daily lessons on the male members of the party, who don't know enough to read the American.

"After a friendly bout, unwelcome guests leave in the following order: men in splints, women in hysterics, children in tears."

Keep up the good work.

Mr. Boston stood on the second green at the Scituate Golf Club. The green is propped up [illegible] a sand bank some 20 feet [illegible]. There is a nasty [illegible] trap in front of the green.

"Perhaps it's a gift," remarked Mr. Boston.

Mayor James M. Curley came along to the second hole shortly after Leary, Fitzpatrick, Nason and Rogers had done their stuff. The mayor's drive was a little bit off to the right, but he chipped on and was down with a three.

"The Mayor plays a good, steady game," said Leary. "He usually goes around 18 holes around 90. He has been in the 80's."

Leary called Mr. Boston's attention to the fact the new fifth tee has been opened. It relieves much of the congestion at the Scituate course.

D. Kilifer, club president, told Mr. Boston the improvements at the fifth tee and along the fairway cost $6000.

"It was worth it," said Mr. Kilifer. "The work improved our course, and also furnished work for quite a few men. Did you ever stop to consider the large number of men who receive work each year at the golf courses throughout the country? In addition to the thousands of men employed at the golf courses, there are many more thousands who are profitably engaged making the necessary equipment for the players.

"Golf has done much to increase the health, happiness and prosperity of the country."

Dorval and McCarthy on Garden Card

Matchmaker Billy Ames of the Boston Garden called Mr. Boston on the telephone.

"I just took a peek at Angus Snyder, Kansas heavyweight, in action at Arthur Bloom's Gym," said Ames. "He looks like a fine ring prospect. I can see where he is going to give Ernie Schaaf all kinds of trouble when they collide in a 10-round bout at the Garden next Tuesday night.

"I believe Schaaf proved his worth when he scored two knockouts over Jim Maloney.

"I'm going to support Schaaf and Snyder by a strong preliminary card. I intend to pit Napoleon Jack Dorval against some first class opposition, while I am looking for an opponent for Jack McCarthy of Roxbury. Dorval and McCarthy have given satisfaction in recent Garden bouts.

"Two weeks from Tuesday night I plan to feature Lou Brouillard against the best available opponent. I have signed Jake Zeramby of Lynn, who has won his last six starts, to appear against a stand out lightweight in the semifinal on the Brouillard card. I'm looking ahead to the Fall when I hope to have the flashy Zeramby in the ring with Fuller and Callahan.

Ames Sees Boom in the Boxing Game

"I find that the fans are once more displaying interest in sports. The record crowds at the Sonnenberg-DeGlane wrestling bout and the Red Sox-Yankees double-header last Sunday proved that the public is interested in stand out attractions.

"With Schaaf, Brouillard, Zeramby, Fuller and Lamar heading the parade, New England has some first class boxers. I also believe Jim Maloney will soon stage a come back in a local ring. Shamus has been in Florida where I understand he has purchased a home, but he'll soon be back in the Hub again."

ANNOUNCER'S CREED

Boston Studio Boss Urges Service

By N. F. T.

At some time somewhere in the celestial sanctums of sound someone may have put pen to paper to write "An Announcer's Creed." Strangely enough, there seems to be no record of such having ever yet been done. At least a copy has not passed this way until today. Score again for Boston, please, this city wants credit for authorship of what appears to be a most humbly phrased significant code by which microphone men may be guided. John Clark, station boss at WBZ, has written it for his staff members.

* * *

It is [illegible] to be pointed [illegible] the creed [illegible] John Clark, who left yesterday on a vacation trip. Merit and meaning appear to characterize the classic but therefore [illegible] presented here for the first time in public print.

THE ANNOUNCER'S CREED

Vagabond voice of the skies, visiting mansion and hut, I am the unseen guest of the nation. Mindful of this, may I not affront any [illegible] creed. Young and old welcome me to their fireside . . . my speech must be wholesome.

I pledge to speak clearly, concisely, accurately, to be alert, to put vitality, enthusiasm and sincerity into my announcing, be it symphony, jazz or time signal. I am a word showman, an invisible salesman.

May I not love my voice nor suffer other alienating conceit but keep striving for perfection. May good judgment spur me to build vocabulary, review grammar, read widely and listen to able contemporaries.

I am the voice of the station . . . by my work it is judged. May I take pride in my work, ever mindful of my responsibility.

* * *

SHRINKS FROM PUBLICITY

All too little is known of John Clark and his conception of radio production. To him a measure of credit must be given for sending to the networks such men as Alwyn Bach, John S. Young, John W. Holbrook, and even the celebrated broadcasting barrister, Dean Gleason L. Archer, all of whom now take regular turns for NBC on the chain.

* * *

Engineers of WAAB have won the race against fellow craftsmen of WABC in New York, having yesterday completed the big steel tower referred to previously as being erected at Squantum. An official dedication ceremony is planned for this coming Friday afternoon at which Sen. David I. Walsh will speak with other notables and members of The Yankee Network personnel. Promptly at 6 o'clock switches will be thrown to inaugurate transmission over the new half wave vertical radiator, the first of its type to be built by any radio station in the United States.

* * *

FLIERS RETURN TO U. S.

Definite arrangements have been made for broadcasting the arrival of Hugh Herndon and Clyde Pangborn when they drop from the skies at Floyd Bennett Airport on their return from foreign shores. Columbia stations will carry the job.

* * *

Radio lanes are threatened with a rather insidious menace of late. Low down gossip let loose by malicious and jealous propagandists often gathers in believers here and there. As is the case along other walks of life, microphone careers are thus placed in jeopardy.

* * *

Latest of the stars to be put on the radio spot by purely manufactured piffle, is Tony Wons. Word has been circulated he is in dutch with his sponsors for some mythical, unexplained reason. Getting at the facts directly, the truth is, those who pay the freight for Tony believe he has the most magnetic voice on the air, like the way he plays the game and consider him a real asset to their program. Confound these nasty rumors, anyway.

* * *

Disillusionment at its height comes after one has been placed before the gadgets of television, to emerge and be informed "You looked like a clown." Still there are radio folk who might well have such a dose administered—great stuff for an acute, or even mild case of conceit.

3 In Cleaners' War Put Acid on Clothes

Chicago, Aug. 5 (INS)—Warfare in the cleaning and dyeing industry broke out today when three men poured acid over all clothing in the plant of the Michigan Cleaners and Dyers.

Armed with revolvers, the men forced their way into the plant, threatening two men with death.

According to police, the plant has had labor troubles.

[illegible] New York Stock Exchange [illegible]

In the days of the so-called Coolidge bull market the debut of such a company would almost certainly have been attended by fireworks on the "Big Board." Exchange's approval of the listing of 31,923,072 shares of Socony-Vacuum makes that the third largest on the list in the number of shares outstanding. General Motors is in the lead with 43,500,000 and Commonwealth & Southern is second with [illegible]. Fourth place goes to General Electric, which has 28,650,659 shares outstanding, and Standard of New Jersey is next with 25,600,046 shares listed.

* * *

Mr. Pratt has extended the paths followed by his father in humanitarian work. His father established the Pratt Institute of Brooklyn, which has given many poor boys "a chance." He established the Marienfeld Camp at Chesham, N. H., many years ago as a vacation place for needy youngsters. Mr. Pratt was graduated at Ex-President Coolidge's alma mater, Amherst.

Chesham Camp had the first broadcasting station in any small town in New England, and at one time, the only such station north of Boston.

Tobacco is one of the crops in which current over-production is reported by one of the big cigarette company heads. So far as New England is concerned, the outcome of the tobacco crop, centered in western Massachusetts and Connecticut, much depends on whether the weather remains favorable. One big hailstorm, such as often occurs, can change the picture in a very few minutes.

* * *

With tobacco largely grown in Canada—in Quebec we have seen it in scores of farm yards, grown like garden crops in New England for home consumption—it seems odd that comparatively little is raised in northern New England. Chester D. Stevens, U. S. Department of Agriculture's agricultural statistician, tells the writer that so far as he is aware no shade grown tobacco (used for cigar wrappers) is this year being grown in New Hampshire, although last year about 69 acres were planted in Hinsdale.

Mr. Stevens states:

"There is small acreage of Havana seed, usually less than 200 acres, grown yearly in Cheshire County, New Hampshire. This tobacco is used mainly for cigar binders, although sometimes a few wrappers are selected from it for the lower-priced cigars."

Textile Fiber Index Declines in Week

Fairchild's textile fiber index generally made a rather poor showing last week the price dropping to 71.21, compared with 73.70 the previous week and 95.89 for the corresponding week a year ago, it was reported yesterday.

The composite cotton goods index declined substantially from the previous week's figure and broke the low established during June. Both gray and finished goods shared in the losses, according to Fairchild.

Today's News of Live Stocks in Wall Street

Trading in American Telephone was an outstanding feature of today's Wall st. trading. Rumor that American Telephone's dividend will be reduced has been widely [illegible] the dividend [illegible] has not been considered.

Associated Press Denies Cut Plan

The Associated Press stated today it had learned from authoritative quarters, in American Telephone, that:

"Inasmuch as the dividend is being earned with something to spare, the question of a cut has not been considered."

Woolworth Gain Is Third of Year

Woolworth sold fractionally lower most of today's session. Increase in F. W. Woolworth Co. July earnings is the third monthly advance so far this year. It is noteworthy in that it was made despite the fact that the month contained only three Saturday shopping days, against four for July, 1930, the Fourth of July holiday this year occurring Saturday.

Utility Group Is Under Pressure

The utility group was under pressure today. Consolidated Gas of New York was forced down over a point and selling was also evidenced in North American, American & Foreign Power and International Telephone.

Rails Continue to Work Lower

Rails continued to work lower, with the failure of car loadings to pick up at this time, pointing to poor earnings for the current quarter. Among the weak issues were Atchison, Baltimore & Ohio, New York Central and Pennsylvania. Central's loadings showed a gain however, for the week just reported over those for the prior week.

Borg Warner and Ford Free Wheeling

Stories to the effect that the company will supply free wheeling for the new Ford car are being circulated in an effort to revive the market in Borg Warner stock.

Plymouth Success Boon to Chrysler

Many complimentary things are said about Chrysler's new Plymouth, by a disinterested broker just returned from several weeks' vacation spent touring the Maine woods in one of the cars. He predicted great demand for the Plymouth this summer and fall and undoubtedly this winter. According to his information, dealers have reordered three to six times their original requirements, as a result of which July production was stepped up to 17,500 cars against the month's preliminary schedule of 7500 cars.

August Figure for Output Is Larger

Chrysler's August output is said to call for approximately 24,000 cars. Since the original Chrysler stock pool terminated by expiration several weeks ago there have been contradictory rumors of a new group active on the constructive side. Whatever may be the case in this regard the fact remains that Chrysler has held its gain remarkably well.

Good Selling Is Seen in Chemical

What can be regarded as good [illegible] is making its reappearance in Allied Chemical.

Bohn Aluminum Reporting Progress

Interests who believe secondary industrial shares possessing reasonable qualities will lead the market out of its present condition are calling attention to Bohn Aluminum. This regard is based on the favorable results achieved thus far by the company due to reduction of operating expenses and overhead, as well as increased diversification.

Selections Made in Sugar Group

Brokers bullish on the sugar situation are showing a preference for Central Aguirre and South Porto Rico issues.

United Aircraft Well Sponsored

Character of sponsorship existing for United Aircraft is demonstrated by the relatively narrow range in which the stock has fluctuated the last fortnight. During this period the price has held within the extreme of 2 points. Recent news regarding the affairs of the company's several subsidiaries has been more optimistic, especially in the cases of Niles Bement Pond and Pratt & Whitney. The latter is working on a larger schedule by reason of a good-sized order received from General Motors.

Breaks Even in First Half Year

United Aircraft is understood to have broken even in the first six months, which means the elimination of a good-sized deficit experience in the initial three months.

Southern California Earnings Larger

Net earnings of Southern California Edison for the first half year after dividends and depreciation showed a gain of about 2 per cent over the same period last year. This showing is viewed as highly satisfactory in view of fact that the company made two voluntary rate reductions in less than two years. The first became effective in November, 1929, and the second on May 1 last. Apparently increased business has offset the lower rate being received.

American Chicle in Scale Demand

American Chicle has been moving within a narrow range for several weeks which was unusual in view of the fluctuations in many other issues. While the market was weak during the early part of last month there seemed to be a consistent demand for the small offerings which appeared from time to time. There is no active sponsorship for the stock, so far as can be discovered, and the buying is of the scale variety, based on the good earnings of the company in the current year of depression. Chicle is one of the issues in which short selling is almost entirely absent.

CURB MARKET TONE IS EASY

New York, Aug. 5. The curb was inclined to ease today, but the downward movement was gentle and punctuated by occasional rallies.

Electric Bond & Share was offered in some volume during the forenoon, selling off a point, but the price firmed when the volume dried up. Other prominent utilities did little. There was some pressure against Brazilian Traction, Associated Gas "A" and United Light "A" but trading in them was light. Utilities Power & Light preferred had another run-up of several points.

Specialties and oils were dull. The latter held close to yesterday's levels, virtually undisturbed by the increase in crude production during the past week. Weakness in the former group was confined to high-priced shares such as Mead Johnson and Aluminum of America.

De Forest Radio, Woolworth, Ltd., General Theaters Equipment preferred and Ford of England ruled nominally lower.

SEES BUSINESS ON WAY UP

New York, Aug. 5 (AP)—The extreme low point of the depression definitely has been passed in certain lines of industry, Standard Statistics Company says.

"Distinct improvement already is evident in the automobile tire, shoe, sugar producing, flour milling and textile trades," the statement adds. "Also, second quarter reports generally have been no worse than previously expected, and in some instances have shown unexpected betterment."

London Has Rally Towards the Close

London, Aug. 5 (AP)—Stocks marked down, particularly in gilt-edge section. The sharp fall in sterling causes fears of further complications. Prices rallied towards the close.

Paris—Drop in pound sterling induced brisk selling on the bourse. International shares suffered heavily, but French issues were little affected.

Berlin—Boerse closed.

Volume Moderate in Bond Dealings

New York, Aug. 5—The bond market declined irregularly today. Sporadic activity appeared in all sorts of issues, but the trading as a whole was moderate. Most foreign railroad and industrial obligations lost ground.

General Electric's Position Is Strong

Dow Jones & Co. say that, despite the fact that General Electric Co. has not been earning its dividends by a small margin this year, it is probable payments at the present rate will be continued.

"The company is strongly fortified with cash," Dow Jones says, "having approximately $140,000,000 in banks. That asset alone is equal to more than two years' payments on the common after allowing for dividends on special stock."

PRESSURE FELT IN QUIET WALL ST. DEALINGS

New York, Aug. 5—Pressure was felt by pivotal leaders in dull Wall St. dealinges today. Bears were aided by reports of low raw steel production and rather light carloadings.

The foreign outlook was clouded by fresh weakness of the British pound sterling, although in Germany, the reopening of the banks for full payment of deposits went off surprisingly well.

TELEPHONE IS WEAK

In the shares market, American Telephone was weak, declining nearly 4 points before it met rallying support. Eastman lost more than 3.

Issues off 2 points or so included American Can, Allied Chemical, Westinghouse Electric, International Harvester, Union Pacific and Johns Manville.

Losses of a point or more were common, appearing in such issues as U. S. Steel, General Motors Pennsylvania, Anaconda, North American, Borden, Public Service of N. J., and Union Carbide.

In connection with selling of American Telephone, there have been bearish rumors in brokerage circles over the dividend, but the Associated Press learned authoritatively that no reduction in the $9 annual rate has been considered, and that earnings are holding above requirements.

Unless next year should prove unexpectedly bad, there is said to be not even a remote prospect of reduction. Directors meet in a fortnight.

The rail issues were depressed by the weekly freight car loadings report for the period ended July 25, showing a decline of 15,803 cars from the preceding week to a total of 741,752 cars. This is a reduction of 360,301 from the high levels of the like week two years ago.

INGOT OUTPUT DOWN

The weekly steel trade reviews reported that ingot production, which had stepped up from 30 to 32 per cent of capacity in the previous wek, was once more back to 30 per cent, the low level of the depression.

Iron Age pointed out that half of the automobile manufacturing capacity was seasonally idle, and thel mportant rail mills shut down, concluding the outlook for August can hardly be called encouraging.

Because dividends have been reduced on such old favorites as U. S. Steel and New York Central, some brokers state that the investing public has become unduly nervous over all dividends.

General Motors directors, meeting after the close of today's market, are expected in usually well-informed quarters to make the regular quarterly payment.

There is believed to be no immediate prospect of curtailmen tof the General Electric disbursment.

Improvement Shown by Grand Union Co.

Grand Union Co. earned $1 on the common stock voting trust certificates in the first six months, as against 97 cents in the same period last year.

Retail sales the first six months totaled $17,396,510, as against $18,057,557 in the initial half of 1930. Tonnage sales for the period, however, were 14 per cent ahead of last year, the lower dollar sales reflecting the reduction in commodity prices this year as compared with last.

Profit margin for the current year was the largest in the company's history. On each dollar of sales there was a profit of .0301 cents, as against .0282 cents last year.

U. S. Investments Abroad 15 Billions

American investments abroad, exclusive of war debts and short term capital, is estimated at 15 billion dollars, while the annual income from this investment is $900,000,000 per annum, according to Eastman, Dillon & Co.

Due to conditions abroad, it is figured that the capital value of this investment, as well as the annual income, has been appreciably impaired. While the effect of this depreciation is difficult to trace, according to the bankeds, it may be regarded as an ecomonic loss which has been suffered by the many individuals and corporations owning these foreign investments.

Western Dairy Has Gain in Earnings

Western Dairy Products Co. reports for half-year ended June 30 net income of $717,921, equivalent after allowing for subsidiaries' preferred dividends and for the regular $2 class A dividends (passed in June), and after allowing for participation privilege of the class A shares, to 90 cents a share on the 297,418 shares of class B stock. In the first six months of 1930 net income was equal to approximately 8 cents a share on class B stock.

Telephone Abroad Makes Expansion

L. M. Ericsson Telephone Co., controlled by Krueger & Toll and associated with International Telephone & Telegraph Corp., reports further progress in Sweden. Automatic exchanges built by Ericsson have begun to function in Italy. Two new exchanges in Mexico City district, with 2000 and 4000 lines, respectively, and three new stations in Argentina also are in operation.

Packard Report for Half Year Is Given

Packard Motor Car Co. reports for half-year ended June 30 net loss of $90,120. Net for quarter ended March 31, 1931, was $11,00[illegible]. For quarter ended June 30, 1931, net loss was $203,125 after all charges, including depreciation and a large part of expenses incidental to tooling up for new models. In quarter ended June 30, 1930, net was $2,874,590, equal to 19 cents a share on 15,000,000 shares.

The company announced new model Packard eights in June and indications are that no new model Packard has ever been so favorably received by the public.

Usual Lull Seen in Hardware Demand

Within the past week the nation's hardware demand has tapered slightly in most of the principal market cenetrs and it appears that the customary midsummer lull is imminent, according to the Hardware Age. July turned out to be a better month than was expected in most trade territories and prospects for a fairly healthy volume of fall business are considered bright, it is stated.

Pacific Telephone Shows Higher Net

Pacific Telephone & Telegraph System reports for the six months ended June 30 a net income of $9,715,064, after depreciation, interest, taxes, etc., equal after preferred dividends, to $4.02 a share on 1,805,000 common shares.

This compares with a net income of $7,927,399 in the first half of 1930, which was equal to $3.04 a share on 1,789,225 shares of common stock.

M. H. Fishman Co. Business Larger

M. H. Fishman Co. sales during July increased 15½ per cent when compared with July, 1930. For the first seven months sales increased 23 6-10 per cent over the corresponding period last year.

Fail to Rebuild Nitrate Cartel

Paris, Aug. 5—Efforts to rebuild the nitrate cartel here failed after the Belgians refused to accept the license system proposed by the German interests. All previous agreements between the producers have been suspended.

Los Angeles Shows Activity Increase

Employment in Los Angeles rose nearly 5 points in July, postal receipts were 7 per cent higher than in June and construction work showed an "optimistic attitude," according to the monthly business review of the Chamber of Commerce.

ADVICE TO INVESTORS IS FREE

Before you buy or sell stocks or bonds, you ought to secure unbiased expert advice. Send your investment inquiries with stamp to Frank H. Meloon, Financial Editor, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop Sq., Boston. All replies are made by mail direct.

FACES LOSS

M. H., Cambridge—Before the stock market crash I bought 14 shares Montgomery Ward, 10 Granby Copper and 50 Cities Service. As you well know, I am very much in a hole. What shall I do?

Ans.—We can be of no assistance. The advice you need would entail a knowledge of future market prices, which no one possesses. No dividends have been paid on Montgomery-Ward since August, 1930. Operations for 1930 proved unprofitable and no improvement has yet set in. Granby Consolidated Mining is speculative. November 1, 1930, the stock was put on a $2 annual basis, the second reduction in six months from $8 rate established November, 1929. August 1 the rate will be $1 a share. Production at mines has been curtailed, pending improvement in the copper industry. Cities Service common dividends are paid partly in cash and in stock. For 12 months ended June 30, 1931, the company reported a surplus before common dividends and reserves of $26,692,084, contrasted with $40,338,435 in the preceding 12 months.

COVERED REGULAR

A. K., Boston—Do you think I can rely on dividends from Corn Products? I have some of the stock at higher levels.

Ans.—For six months ended June 30 Corn Products reported earnings of $1.82 a share, which covered regular dividends for that period by a fair margin. In similar half of preceding year earnings were $2.28 a share. In full year 1930 net of $4.82 a share compared with $5.49 in 1929. Dividends, with extras, have been paid from 1920. The regular annual rate now is $3 a share. Extras amounting to $1.25 were paid during 1930. So far this year $1 a share extra has been distributed. The stock is still selling at a level to yield less than 5 per cent, which doubtless indicates confidence on the part of stockholders.

NO DIVIDENDS

S. E., Boston—As a reader of your paper I want your opinion of buying United States Industrial Alcohol. Does it pay dividends?

Ans.—United States Industrial Alcohol is no longer on a dividend basis, inasmuch as quarterly payment of 50 cents a share expected August 1 will be omitted. May 1 the annual rate was reduced to $2 a share, compared with $6 paid from first quarter of 1929. Earnings in 1930 declined to $2.95 a share, contrasted with $12.62 in 1929. Operations for first six months of current year resulted in a net loss of $527,283, against net profit of $552,485 for first half of 1930. The stock is a speculation. Do you want to make an investment? Let us know the amount you can spend.

LATEST EARNINGS

N. E., Dorchester—I have held 25 shares du Pont for the past two years at a substantial paper loss. Do you look for any advance? What do you think of it?

Ans.—In the six months ended June 30 du Pont covered dividend needs for that period by a few cents a share. Net was $2.23 a share, contrasted with $2.84 in similar period of 1930. Earnings of $4.59 a share in 1930 compared with $6.99 in 1929. The stock can point to an impressive dividend record. Current $4 rate has been maintained from March, 1929. We have no means of ascertaining future market prices. Your guess would be as good as anyone's.

AM. STEEL FOUNDRIES

B. A., Everett—Advice from you in the past has been excellent. Please let me know what you think of a purchase of American Steel Foundries at current levels.

Ans.—American Steel Foundries is still paying dividends, though the annual rate was cut to $1 a share July 15, against $3 paid from 1925. Last year's operations were unfavorably affected by the business depression and net income declined to $2.37 a share, contrasted with $4.70 in 1929. A deficit of 5 cents a share was reported for the March quarter, against 91 cents in similar period of 1930. The stock is speculative.

CHANGE IN RATE

J. C., Boston—I am holding some General Refractories at higher levels. What do you think of it?

Ans.—General Refractories is speculative. Commencing August 25 the annual dividend rate will be $3 a share, against $4 paid from October, 1929. Earnings in 1930 were $7.12 a share, contrasted with $8.51 in 1929. Net for six months ended June 30 was $1.02 a share, compared with $4.60 for the first half of 1930.

FOR $2000

W. W., Wellesley—Title Guarantee & Trust 5s have been suggested for the investment of $2000. What do you think of them?

Ans.—Title Guarantee & Trust first mortgage certificates, paying 5 per cent., are sound. Principal and interest are guaranteed. Invest $2000, as planned. The annual income will be $100.

NEW RAZOR IS ON MARKET

Louis Segal, president of Segal Lock & Hardware Co., Inc., with plants in New England, announces the corporation has perfected and is placing on the market a new "Unimatic Segal Razor," embodying many new features.

The new razor is a decided improvement over the original product of the company, Mr. Segal stated, and it is the only razor of a one-piece type which takes a double-edged blade.

Production schedule of these new razors calls for an output of approximately 10,000 a day as compared with 5500 a day, the schedule maintained on the old razor, he announced, adding:

"Our plant is working 24 hours a day to keep up with the demand for Segal blades. We are installing several new high-speed automatic units for the manufacture of these blades, one of which should be in operation in a few days, and two additional in four to eight weeks, bringing the total to six. By the end of this year we should have 10 units in operation, with a production of not less that 600,000 to 800,000 blades daily.

"I am glad to report that the trend of earnings is decidedly upward and, while we do not publish interim statements, results for the full year 1931 should surpass the net profit of $229,440 shown in the year ended December 31, 1930."

Kelvinator Making Gain in Shipments

Detroit, Aug. 5—Kelvinator is making pleasing gains, Vice-President Burritt states:

"Kelvinator shipments during July ran 49 per cent ahead of July, 1930, while June shipments ran 40 per cent ahead of June, 1930. Current orders on hand August 1 were substantially greater than Aug. 1, 1930. Kelvinator is running full force to meet demand for its product. The excellent business it is enjoying is undoubtedly due to the 'comparison campaign' now running all over the country."

Service Company Earnings Higher

National Public Service [illegible] reports gross earnings of $34,4[illegible] for year ended June 30, com[illegible] with $33,088,270 for the same pe[illegible] a year ago. For the June quarter earnings totalled $8,662,257, compared with $8,341,083 a year ago.

Starrett Corp. Net Profit Is $797,797

Starrett Corporation, including wholly-owned subsidiaries, reports for the six months ended June 30 a net profit of $797,797 after interest, taxes, etc., equal, after dividend requirements on 6 per cent preferred stock, to 74 cents a share on 380,050 common shares.

Gross revenues for the six-months period totaled $2,707,393, compared with $2,356,064 in the first half of 1930. Unfinished business on June 30 last aggregated $23,724,923.

After a long period of trial and acquittal, our Social Service Dept. has finally succeeded in inventing the Jim Dandy Whatnot. The Jim Dandy sells for the sum of $5 in stamps or bail bonds and is, by actual test, absolutely useless. Which makes it an ideal commodity to sell high-pressure salesmen who punch your door bell and are too big to be punched back.

POLICE HOLD 6 IN CUBAN PLOT

Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 5 (AP)—Five Cubans and an American were arrested as they stepped from a speedboat at the steel pier today.

Police are holding them as the remnant of a band of 150 men engaged in a Cuban revolutionary plot who made a secret dash from New York last night to board a ship off the Jersey coast.

The men were plentifully supplied with money, police said. They are not under formal arrest, but are being held for questioning.

When about five miles out, William Carey, the American, said they encountered bad weather. Carey said the Cubans became nervous, said they guessed they would be unable to find the ship they were looking for and asked to be put back ashore.

New Hampshire Safe Against Hay Famine

Concord, N. H., Aug. 5 (AP)—Although heavy rains during June and July caused serious damage to the hay crop, this State will not suffer from a hay famine next spring, Andrew L. Felker, State commissioner of agriculture, announced today after a survey.

Several thousand tons of hay were spoiled by rain squalls and thunder showers, but New Hampshire harvested a bumper crop.

PAINE TO KEEP OLD POLICY

The management of Paine Furniture Company, still in the hands of direct descendants of the founder, will continue the business along lines that have been responsible for its growth and pre-eminence in the home furnishing field.

The new officers and other members of the personnel include men who have been with the company for many years and are conversant with Paine traditions of quality and service.

The values which Paine buying power has made possible in the past are to be made an even more notable feature and the high standards of quality will be rigidly adhered to.

It is the intention of the management to offer dependable furniture at prices in line with the trend of today but never to descend to levels inconsistent with satisfaction.

As a preliminary step in this program the company is now holding a re-valuation sale including every item in stock at the most drastic markdowns ever taken in order to start the fall season with an entire selection of new merchandise.

Why Not a Round-up?

America has become the haven for the criminals of all nations.

Weak, ineffective immigration laws let the undesirables come here.

Apathetic, careless, indifferent enforcement of the existing laws permitted the undesirables to remain here, to be recruited into the gangs of the underworld, now indulging in a high carnival of racketeering and gang murder, sweeping peaceful streets in neighborhood districts with their automatics and machine guns, strewing public thoroughfares with the maimed bodies of innocent bystanders, and little children mowed down while at play.

There was NO reason why these undesirable aliens, who make up the majority of these murderous gangs, should have been allowed to enter this country.

There is NO REASON WHY THEY SHOULD BE PERMITTED TO REMAIN FOR AN INSTANT.

Present laws are amply sufficient to deport many undesirables IF THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT SAW FIT TO ENFORCE THEM.

Congress could pass laws to deport every alien with a criminal record and every undesirable resident of the country, IF CONGRESS SAW FIT TO PLACE PUBLIC PEACE AND SECURITY ABOVE POLITICS, AND ACT.

Defiant of all constituted authority, the criminal element has been waging war, a bitter war, a brutal war, ruthlessly and relentlessly against decent citizens.

And because of AN UNHOLY ALLIANCE, in many communities, and in MANY SECTIONS OF THIS VERY CITY between police, criminal classes and politicians, the decent citizens have suffered, lives have been lost, health endangered, property destroyed.

The UNDERWORLD, up to the present time, HAS BEEN WINNING THIS WAR.

As William Randolph Hearst pointed in a signed editorial in the Boston Sunday Advertiser of August 2nd, the underworld has been shooting down people in the streets, levying tribute on honest business men, abducting women, slaughtering children, corrupting law-enforcing machinery, buying judges, subsidizing political organizations and terrorizing decent citizens.

In the hysteria of the Great War aliens were rounded up and interned promptly when their identity was known.

What is to prevent the IMMEDIATE ROUND-UP of every undesirable alien, of every racketeer, of every gangster, of every gun-toter in a concerted drive by Federal, State and city authorities—then the prompt deportation of every one who can't prove his right to stay here?

The way to do a thing is to do it. This nation cannot temporize with crime or with a defiant underworld.

All official agencies MUST UNITE NOW to rout out the undesirables who are a constant menace not only to all American institutions but to the lives, the liberties, the safety and the happiness of American citizens.

Let us have ACTION, DIRECT ACTION, PROMPTLY!

Holiday Traffic Problem
Express Lanes Needed

The Jefferson Club of Cambridge, evidently a splendid institution, gave its annual outing and picnic to the children last Sunday.

Eleven thousand children were its guests.

There were 447 auto buses and trucks in the carnival parade which wended its way from Inman Square in the immense holiday traffic to the picnic grounds of Pinehurst Reservation at Bedford.

We are relying less and less upon the railroads and more and more upon the newer forms of transportation.

This traffic presents a serious problem not alone to the thousands of autoists who had to bide their time while this procession of happy children, equal in size to an army division, moved through the streets but to the public as a whole.

No section of the country is possessed of more and finer scenes for week-end and holiday excursions. Yet the enormous congestion reduces the joy of touring to Nantasket, Revere and the scores of other natural attractions.

Some $20,000,000 will be expended for highway construction and maintenance in Massachusetts this year. The needs of the remote and isolated agricultural sections seem to have been quite well supplied for the present at least.

Our principal need today is for express routes, of at least four lanes, between the large centers of population such as Boston, Worcester, Providence, New Bedford and Fall River, Lowell and Lawrence, Springfield, Holyoke and Westfield.

The autoists are paying heavily in many forms of taxes for a comfort and convenience they cannot get until some of these millions are expended to relieve the dense traffic in the metropolitan areas.

Push the Strandway Work

The City Council complains it did not know what it was doing when it ratified the act of the Legislature authorizing the $1,000,000 development of the Strandway in East Boston.

The Council is not deaf, dumb or blind, at least its auricular talents have not been diminished by the general depression.

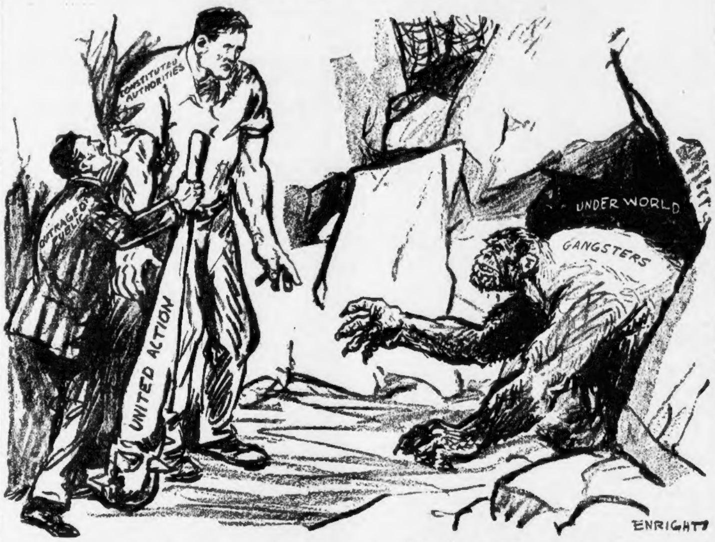
None of these gentlemen is signing blank checks or invisible contracts, in his personal affairs, anyway.

There were some among us who argued that the people should not be allowed the Initiative and Referendum, because they would be unaware of what they were voting upon.

First, it was not true; secondly, if it were true it could not be worse than the charge which the Council lays against itself.

The East Boston Strandway will be an important arm of traffic to the north of Boston. Let the work proceed.

He Needs a Stout Club



The President and the Federal Government have power in themselves and power to co-operate with State governments to end lawlessness in the United States and to stop this carnival of racketeering and gang murder. Only through the united action of all official agencies will the monster of the underworld be routed.

Listen, World!
By Elsie Robinson

What Women Believe About Men

WOMEN BELIEVE such amazing tommyrot about men. And I'm not now alluding to Giggley Gert, of the notion counter, or Bashful Bess, out in the sticks. I'm referring to smart, modern mamas . . . bachelor working girls . . . college graduates . . . brilliant professional She's. One and all, regardless of age, creed, color or condition, females have these notions about males. Namely:

Elsie Robinson

Man is an entirely different animal from Woman.

His tastes, attitudes and reactions are utterly unlike hers. She has a highly attuned and refined "nervous system." He's just put together with rivets.

All men are by nature philanderers—no matter how long they may have been married or how faithfully they may have served the Missis. Just give the Old Boy a chance and he'll turn tomcat! For the chief and constant desire of the male heart is to "Make Some Woman."

But no man is ever fair to a woman, for the whole sex is selfish, jealous, coarse, unreasonable, stupid and unreliable.

But, in spite of their obvious stupidity, men think they know everything, and are terribly stuck on themselves for no good reason at all.

Because of this, any Smart Gal can make a fool of any man without half trying.

Men boast about their strength, but actually they are lost without women.

At heart every man is both a villain and a great, big, helpless cry-baby.

So things being as they are, the only way a Nice Woman can get along with a Horrid Man is to—

Flatter him incessantly.

Never let him know what you're thinking, but always make him believe that you're thinking of him.

Be nice to him—when he deserves it—but never too nice. Never do too much for him or he won't appreciate you.

Never let him be too sure of you. Keep him guessing. Don't let him think he's the Only One. Play on his jealousy.

Above all, watch him night and day, and never, NEVER, give him a chance to put anything over on you.

This, I repeat, is what Every Woman thinks of Every Man in her secret heart—and has been thinking for the last thirty million years. And if you think a few years of co-education and equal suffrage are going to put a dent in a tradition like that, you don't know feminine nature. Why is marriage still such a heavy risk, though we've been practicing it for centuries? Why is friendship almost impossible between men and women—and business partnership a continual pain in the neck? That's why. Because women have inherited these idiotic notions from the old days when squaws whispered mutiny over grinding bowls and houris raised heck in harems.

But it's time we got over it, sisters. The simple truth is that Man and Woman were molded out of the same hunk of mud, endowed with the same emotions. Neither sex has a monopoly on decency or indecency . . . courage or cowardice . . . sense or nonsense. Men aren't out to Get Women any more than women are out to Get Men. It flatters our conceit to think they are, girls, but s'matter of fact, we women are not half as much of a Treat or a Temptation as we think we are. Ninety-nine out of a hundred men get fed up with romance mighty pronto, and much prefer a snappy game of poker or a lazy hour of fishing to any Cleopatra that ever smirked from a tiger skin.

All of which is the truth—s'help me. But just try to make any Nice Lady believe it! For what's there left to make life exciting for a Nice Lady if you take away all the dirt?

Wise Sayings

He who can at all times sacrifice pleasure to duty approaches divinity.
—Lavater.

Nor is fame only unsatisfying in itself, but the desire of it lays us open to many accidental troubles.
—Addison.

A man must be excessively stupid, as well as uncharitable, who believes there is no virtue but on his own side.
—Addison.

The boundary of man is moderation. When once we pass that pale our guardian angel quits his charge of us.
—Feltham.

In France

Where Riviera Begins

CANNES, Aug. 5—This is a perky little Paris by the sea and the beginning of the Riviera—that is the Riviera of swaggering hotels, millionaires and their paramours, fast life, pseudo-plutocracy and a dumping ground for scorbutic outcast royalty from all points of the compass.

While not so international a high spot as Monte Carlo, it nevertheless offers a mixing of races. This morning on the Croisette, the promenade, I saw a Maharajah in all his trappings, an Egyptian i Bond street clothes and his trailing wife in native veils, a bearded turbaned Moroccan and an American newsboy.

But chiefly the crowds are Anglo-American. American bars are as thick as flies around molasses. English is spoken everywhere and it is the most conscienceless gyp joint on hither side of the Atlantic. The clientele is mostly saps whose ideas of life are food, wine, gambling and rubbing shoulders with minor royalty.

In New York we call the same outfit "cafe society." No other spot on the Cote d'Azur exacts so much tax impertinence from visitors. Taxis charge what they please and you pay or go to the hoosegow. The whole town is in league to fleece and they snip a wicked pair of shears.

Cannes boasts in its garages more Rolls, Hispanos and other luxury cars than any resort in Europe. The concierge tells me an Indian prince whose yacht is in the harbor brought ten various makes of cars along for his month's outing. That's princing!

Whatever one may think of the section, motoring on the encircling hills is unsurpassed although natural scenic beauty is being roughed up by offensive dislay of advertisements. One, incidentally, on a giant rock heralds a "Dinty Moore cornbeef and cabbage" dinner.

Cannes was the accidental discovery of an English Lord, who fleeing the rigors of a London winter, was stopped here on way to Italy by a quarantine. The town was then a mere clump of fishing shacks. The visitor built a villa, found the climate salubrious and voila!—the Riviera was launched.

* * *

Before lunch we motored along a bristling pine-plumed slope for about 12 miles to Grasse, center of French perfume making. Although a lover of perfumes, the visit dampened my ardor. Five miles away the air was surcharged with a heavy and to me funeral fragrance, suggesting an undertaking parlor. Yet I got off a good one when I said to my wife: "I would like to turn back. But if you wish you can go to Grasse." Always a one—merry and bright!

* * *

In the neighborhood are 10,000 acres of roses, tuberoses, jasmine, violets, pinks, orange blossoms and such. From the petals various scents are made. Most plants are abandoned monasteries and convents filled with a disarray of untidy workers, filthy with grime and sweat. A few peeks and all the exotic romance of perfume vanished for me.

* * *

A slatternly cicerone with two chin warts guided us through room after room. There was a confusing blur of flowers being desecrated by wretched hands. Stripped petals are tossed into baskets and then into vats of boiling and messy fat—I thought of the Chicago stockyards. In this way the essence is condensed and refuse fat is made into dainty soap sold for 60 cents a bar along rue de la Paix.

* * *

Each season a total of 700,000 tons of flower petals are turned into exquisite essence. A dozen tons are often needed for a single liter of the expensive essences. But it was worth the drive when returning we turned abruptly into a plateau that offered the most exciting view seen in Europe. Below was the expanse of aquamarine blue fringed with pearly sand and dimpley with red roofs. For miles each way the winding shores coquetted with the glistening sea in a riotous burst of splendor. Such views stimulate my faith in immortality more than all the books and sermons. I drove silently homeward determined to be a better boy. Even before dinner I wrote a long letter to the folks.

But I hopped from the cloud back at Cannes when I got my bill. Never was so much larceny packed on a small sheet. For instance: To maid for turning down bed covering—five francs fifty. I'd turn down a bed and chop the kindling for that.

Just Folks

A Thought

Perhaps we've wandered far from what God meant
And planned these lives of ours to be—
Made ourselves slaves instead of staying free,
And sowed the world with crops of discontent.
With every year new trifles we invent,
Which not to own is labeled poverty,
Increasing thus the stream of misery
'Gainst which our strength and courage must be spent.
Fortune and fame and pride vexations make.
If we were wise enough these lures to scorn,
Perhaps our hearts would not so often ache;
There might be less to fret about and mourn.
Seeking too much may be mankind's mistake!

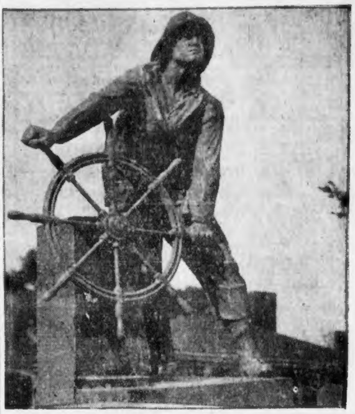
Typical N. E. Mariner
Bay State Turns to the Sea Again



FISHERMEN'S MEMORIAL AT GLOUCESTER

Take a look at the face of this man, in sculpture.

He is the New England fisherman, typical of the mariner of all types of ships.

He is the embodiment of New England sturdiness and adventure.

Massachusetts was great upon the sea in his day.

The Sacred Cod represented a great fishing industry, also that the products of New England manufacture permeated the trade marts of the world and demonstrated that America could compete for foreign commerce anywhere.

We today are as well situated as ever before, with opportunities on a larger scale than tempted the courage of our ancestors.

We enjoy the proximity of a day closer to England and the continental centers of population and trade.

Our people are becoming ship-minded again. New England consciousness and solidarity have been revived. Our export trade had been resumed and when the tariff fell upon us it had reached $250,000,000 annually.

The railroads are scrapping among themselves for new entries to Boston for Eastbound goods.

Steamship companies promise to put their fastest vessels here for regular sailings.

We need some ships of our own to supplement and co-ordinate their liners and freighters, and to make us free and independent on the sea.

Perhaps the banks, their vaults bulging with idle money, will see these fine prospects which everybody but them has already visualized.

We can then look upon the face of this hardy mariner as emblematic of the present, rather than as a reminder of a great past.

Col. Coupal Forgets
Coolidge Persisted in Refusal to Run

Colonel James F. Coupal says that after Calvin Coolidge announced he did not choose to run again, he sat back confidently expecting to be drafted and that he suffered disappointment and humiliation because he was not drafted.

The Colonel is a good physician but a poor historian.

He seems to forget:

1—That the President decided not to run again.

2—That when there was insistent talk of drafting him, he summoned the Republican National Committee to the White House, reminded them in a formal speech that he had made his decision and warned them to proceed to the selection of another candidate.

3—That he issued a similar announcement to the Republican leaders of New York, headed by Charles D. Hilles, who were intent upon forcing him into the arena again.

4—That he sent his secretary, Mr. Everett Sanders, to Kansas City to instruct the leaders of the Republican National Convention not to permit any votes to be cast for his renomination.

5—That a specific reaffirmation of his decision not to run again was made to the convention by the spokesman of the Vermont delegation, his native State.

Mr. Coolidge's decision was an excellent manifestation of his regard for the traditions of this country and an excellent demonstration of his modest character.

He was true to the principles of Washington in his opposition to three successive terms. He was true to himself in resisting the temptations and flatteries which are showered upon Presidents and calculated to stimulate their personal vanity.

His decision was an historical one, which should not be demeaned or diminished by Colonel Coupal or any other person.
